The three angels (officially: "Playing Angels") is an iconic sculpture along the Schuylkill River. It serves as a distance marker for rowing and a gathering point for rowers, family and trailers, during the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta. Erected in 1972, the three dancing angels have presided over 51 of the 53 HOSR years.

Robert (Bob) Cody is a native of Philadelphia, and he lives in Center City. He is an enthusiastic supporter of the Arts and rowing in Philadelphia, and has painted in many media over the years. His favorite subject is scenes of rowing along the Schuylkill River. He is a Certificate graduate of the Pennsylvania Academy for the Fine Arts, where his featured work has received prizes for sculpture, painting and printmaking. His artwork pops up on Instagram as @midniteinkster, particularly when the moon is full.

HEAD OF THE SCHUYLKILL
REGATTA
EST. 1970 • PHILADELPHIA

Dear Friends,

It is a great pleasure to welcome competitors and spectators from across the country and around the world to the 53rd Head of the Schuylkill Regatta.

Though the 2023 HOS may look much like regattas of pre-pandemic years, as other areas in life, it was not left unaffected. Our core priorities - the health and safety of our competitors, coaches and volunteers, and the provision of a fair and competitive race - remain front and center. But how we meet those priorities continues to evolve as we find ways to work smarter and turn our challenges into assets. Many of the changes that we were forced to make during the pandemic and prolonged dredging have been incorporated into our regular operations. You will find food trucks delivering Philly's very best street eats, vendors lining the path, and close-ups of your favorite rowers on our live stream, thanks to creative responses to challenges.

In planning, we pause to reflect on our history, our growth and our commitment to our competitors, spectators, partners, and the City of Philadelphia. Some of you come to compete in the birthplace of American rowing, others return each year for the beauty of the Schuylkill in autumn, some to reunite with former teammates, and more for the competition and the challenge of the course. All however, cognizant or not, become an important part of the tradition of one of the most iconic head races in the country.

Our 2023 program book draws on the heart, history and future of the Schuylkill River rowing community. Our talented and passionate writers convey with honesty the highs and lows of our past and present; reading through the articles as I sat neck deep in regatta planning/challenges/opportunities, I was reminded of a beloved quote, 'everything is going to be ok, and everything IS ok.'

Merry Jones, a regular contributor, continues a series highlighting The People of Boathouse Row. We honor Sophie Socha, hailing from Philadelphia Girls' Rowing Club, as the heart and soul of women's rowing since the 1960's.

In "Where Have the Women Coaches Gone?", Maura Kennedy describes the contributors that result in the limited number of women coaches and offers efforts and goals to create small but impacting change in representation.

Christopher Doyle describes how the HOSR Committee 50 has set out to create better solutions for how to preserve rowing materials/archives we have in Philadelphia while at the same time, working with counterparts across the country to make them accessible to the community and public.

Rich Philips eloquently provides a glimpse into the future of rowing.

Merrill Hilf, as always, puts us on the water, with a reminder to simply live in the joy this sport gives, in a not-so-simple world.

And Dotty Brown invites you on her tour of Boathouse Row - take the stroll (promised to make you feel A-OK).

With appreciation to our sponsors and our partners for their continued support, and sincere gratitude to our Board of Directors and our amazing volunteers who truly believe the HOSR is more than just a regatta and are committed to making a difference. Together - WE THANK YOU - for showing up, giving your very best, and enjoying this experience with your rowing family. As always, we love to hear from you, our biggest asset; please do not hesitate to reach out to info@hosr.org with any thoughts or ideas.

With gratitude,

Jennifer Wesson

Dear Friends,

Here in Philadelphia, we are excited for the fall. Our leaves are turning, our students are learning, and we are eagerly awaiting the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta, Philadelphia's fall festival of rowing!

It is always a pleasure to welcome the thousands of competitors, coaches, family, and friends to Philadelphia on the last weekend in October. This year, more than ever, Philadelphia remains America's destination city for competitive rowing, hosting more regattas each year than any other racing venue in the United States.

Launched in 1970, the Head of the Schuylkill is the city's largest regatta, with more than 9,000 competitors. Known as a 'racer's race,' there are many long-term and friendly rivalries among high schools, colleges, masters, and rowing clubs that visit from across the country and around the world. Philadelphia is also home to several high-performance training programs as demonstrated by the number of Olympians who have trained here, and continue to train here, on the iconic Schuylkill River.

Watching the growth of the Regatta, on and off the water, I am so proud that it has become much more than a regatta by working year-round to reach out to the greater community, building strong partnerships with the City, Fairmount Park, schools, neighborhoods, businesses, and local artists. The organizing committee works tirelessly, year-round, to ensure that the Regatta is safe, competitive, and fun. The generous support of corporate sponsors, partners, in-kind contributors, and individual donors is very much appreciated.

During your stay, I hope you will make time to visit our cultural attractions and historic landmarks and enjoy our outstanding restaurants. For master rowers, for 20-somethings, for high school and college crews, and their families—there are numerous "off the water" attractions for everyone. Philadelphia, and Philadelphians, welcome you!

My best wishes for an enjoyable and successful regatta.

Sincerely,

James F. Kenney

Welcome,

As Commissioner of the Philadelphia Department of Parks and Recreation, I feel very fortunate to welcome competitors, their coaches, friends, and families to Fairmount Park for one of my favorite fall events, the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta.

The Regatta board of directors and organizing committee spend countless hours on behalf of the entire river community. We sincerely thank them for working to produce a safe and successful event. As the largest urban park system in the world, Fairmount Park is never more spectacular than it is this time of year. We hope you will take the time to enjoy the Park in all its glory as it provides a perfect backdrop for the more than 9000 athletes who compete on our beautiful, but challenging, 2.4-mile headrace course.

The Schuylkill River has a long and storied history in Fairmount Park. As the Park's steward, the Department of Parks and Recreation is dedicated to providing competitors and coaches with a first-class racing venue and an experience they will long remember. As we come to the end of the much needed and long-awaited dredging project, our top priority remains... as always, keeping the river safe for all recreational users and the many regattas for which Philadelphia is famous.

We thank the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta for their efforts to showcase the Park, the River and the City to all of their competitors, spectators and supporters. We especially thank them for their ongoing efforts to keep our park litter-free by implementing numerous 'clean up days' throughout the year and event protocols for waste; and for their efforts to include the river communities. Our special thanks to the Regatta's sponsors, in-kind contributors, donors, and partners for their continued support. We all agree that it really does take a village!

We hope you will take time to explore the historic landmarks and statues along the racecourse and in the Park during this glorious season. Thank you for your commitment to rowing and the greater rowing community and for encouraging people from all communities to participate in the sport. Enjoy the weekend!

Sincerely,

Dottie Brown: Teller of River History and Tales

By Signe Wilkinson

MEASURING IN AT A TOWERING 5 FOOT 1 INCH TALL, Dottie Brown knew she wasn't destined to be an Olympic rower. As an ace reporter going after stories for the Philadelphia Bulletin and then for the Philadelphia Inquirer. She was used to a lot of legwork but not the kind needed for championship rowing. Mesmerized by the sport and having retired from journalism, however, she started taking lessons, joined Vesper Boat Club, competed in regattas and became active in Philadelphia's rowing community.

In 2012, Temple University Press approached her to do a book about rowing. She asked herself, "How can I write a book that would be interesting to me and the public and would capture the history of the river in an engaging way?"

Her preliminary research at the Library Company of Philadelphia turned up the 1853 founding constitution of the Bachelors Barge Club "which explains you had to be a bachelor to be a member. If you married you had to leave the club. A zillion rules on things like correct costumes. — I WANTED to do the book."

Thanks to Temple University Press's backing and a major grant from the late philanthropist Gerry Lenfest, "Boathouse Row: Waves of Change in the Birthplace of American Rowing" is the beautifully illustrated, engagingly written result. Ellen Carver, a longtime HOSR organizer describes it as, "The definitive book on Boathouse Row as only Dotty, with her background, experience and curiosity could do."

Instead of simply organizing a chronological "And then in 1874 the next Club was founded and these guys won medals", each chapter tackles a single topic. Together, the chapters illuminate the sport, its evolution from rich, white men's clubs, the compulsive personalities attracted to it, and the two centuries of social change in the wider world that shaped it. Dotty notes that, "Women could vote before they could row" and that now neighborhood kids of many colors are starting to enter the sport.

In addition to being a good read, "Boathouse Row" is a gorgeous book filled with more than 160 photographs and engravings, many in color. Dottie says that, "For me, the book created a new career. I have become the historian of Boathouse Row!"

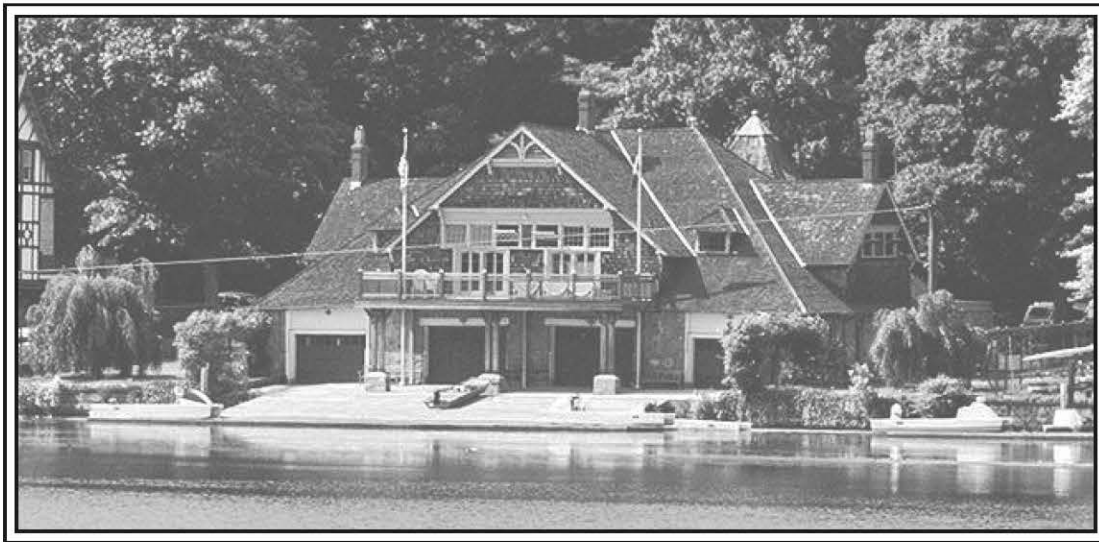

You can meet Dottie and buy her book at the big tent at the Three Angels Statues during the regatta weekend.

Signe Wilkinson is a member of University Barge Club.

With sincere appreciation to University Barge Club, proud host of the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta for 53 years.

In 1970, three members of University Barge Club, located in the heart of Philadelphia's Boathouse Row, launched the idea for a new fall race. At a time when only elite, college and junior athletes competed in "head" or distance races, the newly established Head of the Schuylkill Regatta emphasized graduate oarsmen and opened racing to newly emerging masters' and womens' teams. An estimated 180 competitors participated in the first race. Now, the second largest two-day regatta, the HOSR is affectionately known as "America's Favorite Regatta."

University Barge Club (UBC) was founded in 1854 by ten members of the freshman class of the University of Pennsylvania, organized "for the purpose of instruction and improvement in, and enjoyment of, the art of rowing, and the cultivation of a friendly feeling in all of those who participate in this amusement and exercise." Today it boasts a robust masters program open to all women and men rowers and is home of the rowing programs for Springside Chestnut Hill Academy.

Where Have All The Women Coaches Gone?

By Maura Kennedy

LISTENING ON THE BANKS OF THE RIVER to the shouts of the rowing coaches, spectators may hear less diversity in the collegiate coaches' voices this year. Out of Philadelphia's seven largest schools with Division 1 (D1) rowing programs, only three of the top collegiate women's rowing programs have women head coaches (Temple University, Villanova University, and Drexel University). Arguably the oldest rowing community in the United States and a leader in the rowing industry, Boathouse Row and university programs in the Philadelphia area still struggle to break the collegiate coaching glass ceiling and make a historical difference in gender equity. While there are various contributors that result in the limited number of women head coaches, which is further explored in this article, it is disappointing that a rowing generation protected by Title IX is experiencing a severe lack of female representation and dealing with its impacts. Despite crew's reputation as a predominantly male-dominated sport historically resistant to change, when 12 women leave their coveted head coaching positions at D1 universities at the end of a racing season, it begs the questions, where are all the women coaches going and why?

2023: AN EXODUS

At the end of the 2022-2023 school year, more than 17% of the head coaches at 91 NCAA Division 1 women's rowing programs left their positions, according to rowing reports. Close to 25 coaches in total — both head and assistant coaches — left the profession by the end of August. "This summer has been the biggest coaching carousel that we've seen in a long time at the collegiate level," says Villanova Women's Rowing Head Coach Carissa Adams.

The turnaround is being called an unusual "exodus" of coaches. It also provided an opportunity to hire, promote, and retain more women in head coaching and leadership positions. The former D1 coaches — all women — cited various reasons for leaving, which is explored later in the section, "Quitting Time: Reasons." Heading into the 2023-2024 racing season, almost half of all those hired to replace the women as head coaches of D1 women's rowing programs were men.

1. Boston University - Malcolm Doldron hired as head coach
2. Colgate University - Jim Lister hired as head coach

3. Dartmouth University - John Graves hired as head coach
4. Delaware University - Asiya Mahmud hired as head coach
5. George Washington University - Paul Allbright hired as head coach
6. La Salle University - Brian Perkins hired as head coach
7. Loyola Marymount University - Allison Foster hired as head coach
8. Michigan State University - Stacey Rippetoe hired as head coach
9. Radcliffe/Harvard University - Claire Ochal hired as head coach
10. Southern Methodist College - Chase Graham hired as head coach
11. Stanford University - Lizzy Houston hired as LWT head coach
12. University of Central Florida - Mara Allen hired as head coach
13. University of Miami - James Mulcahy hired as head coach
14. University of Oklahoma - Sarah Trowbridge hired as head coach
15. University of Tennessee - Kim Cupini hired as head coach
16. University of Wisconsin - Vicky Opitz hired as head coach

"When female coaches leave the industry for any reason, I watch very closely how schools are filling those positions. Moreover, I find the staffing dynamics of women's rowing programs interesting and am curious to see if programs headed by a man are supported by female or male assistant coaches," states Temple University's Women's Rowing Head Coach Rebecca Gryzbowski.

A quick Google search reveals that a majority of the top Philadelphia-area collegiate rowing programs have men heading the women's rowing programs and holding the leadership positions in the sports department — including director and head coach — with women serving in supporting roles — such as assistant coaches — which are often underpaid or volunteer positions. The below outline is a look at the top seven collegiate women's rowing programs in the Philadelphia area, the number of women on the coaching staff, and their head coaches (HC).

- Drexel University: 2/2 women coaches; Katie Lane (HC)
- Jefferson University - 1/3 women coaches; Michiel Bartman (HC)
- La Salle University - 0 women coaches; Brian Perkins (HC)
- Saint Joseph's University - 2/3 women coaches; Gerry Quinlan (HC)
- Temple University - 2/2 women coaches; Rebecca Gryzbowski (HC)
- University of Pennsylvania - 2/3 women coaches; Wesley Ng (HC)
- Villanova University - 2/2 women coaches; Carissa Adams (HC)

"With all the changes happening, it's so surprising there aren't more women coaches, but I'm really excited to see the women who did step up this season, especially the younger head coaches. I'm looking forward to working together with the other female head coaches in the Philly area to be a resource for the up-and-coming generations of women who may be thinking about coaching as a career,” says Katie Lane, Drexel University’s Women’s Rowing Head Coach. Before Lane was hired this summer, Paul Savell served as Drexel’s Director of Rowing.

“A point of frustration that many coaches don’t think about is how women react to male coaching versus female coaching and how that impacts individual and team performance. Having an all-female coaching staff, it’s something we try to let recruits know that sets us apart from other schools. I feel strongly that women should be given opportunities, and I go out of my way to be fair in hiring women,” Adam states.

Down the river at University of Pennsylvania’s boathouse, Associate Head Coach Kumari Lewis is proud of Penn’s holistic approach to coaching. “I appreciate looking at the female rowers holistically and caring about more than just their erg scores. However, with most of the women’s programs run by male head coaches, I don’t think that’s the norm. There are exceptions, of course, but women’s perspectives and involvement on the coaching staff make a difference,” Lewis says.

THE DATA

According to the 2022-2023 Women in College Coaching Report Card by The Tucker Center for Research on Girls & Women in Sport, there were additional missed opportunities — 52 in total — when it came to hiring and promoting women into head coaching spots, which ultimately were filled by men. “Looking at other sports, we see women collectively doing a better job in advocating for themselves and pushing the expectations forward in terms of pay and contracts,” said Madeline Davis Tully, Boston University’s former women’s head coach. Davis Tully was one of the D1 head coaches who stepped down at the end of the 2022-2023 racing season following a six-year tenure as director of women’s rowing.

Only 48.7% of head coaches of Division 1 women’s crew programs are women, with Women in College Coaching Report Card giving rowing a “C” report card grade and falling dramatically behind top-rated sports programs for women in school, which include golf, rifle, wrestling, and basketball. “As a coach, I want to motivate people to become coaches and leaders; however, it’s tough to fill a position that you don’t see yourself in if you’re constantly surrounded by people who don’t look or sound like you,” Lewis states.

Recently, the Associated Press published a study by University of Central Florida’s Institute for Diversity and Ethics in Sport (TIDES) that showed in 2022, women held just 42% of head coaching positions of all women’s teams in NCAA Division I as well as 35.6% in Division II and 43.8% in Division III. For all three divisions combined, women filled 41.2% of head coaching positions and 50.3% of assistant coaching positions for women’s teams.

“As someone who stepped out of the coaching ring for a few years, I almost played into those numbers. However, what was best for me was to step aside and make sure I didn’t lose that love for coaching. Now that I’m back as a head coach, I’m excited we’re one of the schools that are taking back the female head coaching position. It makes a huge difference to have a woman as a head coach, and it is extremely beneficial for collegiate athletes to have a role model with whom they can relate,” says Lane.

QUITTING TIME: REASONS

Helpful studies, surveys, research, and published data provide insight into the reasons why there are less women head coaches than men at the collegiate level. For purposes of this article, I also asked women coaches from the Philadelphia area to contribute their experiences.

1. Pay

- a. While most coaches don’t get involved with the sport of rowing for the money, not all coaching positions offer a liveable wage. According to MIT experts, the living wage in the U.S. is $104,077.70 per year for a family of four. In a 2023 Salary Survey of Division 1 head coaches by Collegiate Rowing Coaches Association (CRCA), 10 out of 85 head coach respondents — mainly from the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference, Patriot League Conference, Atlantic 10 Conference, West Coast Conference, and LWT category — report to making less than $55,000 a year. The CRCA Salary Survey also shows that in the two leagues where the number of women head coaches outnumber male head coaches — specifically, the Patriot League Conference and LWT category — they are the lowest-paying head coaches in Division 1.

2. Title IX

- a. With the passage of Title IX 51 years ago, coaching positions became more lucrative, and the salaried jobs coaching women’s teams became attractive to male applicants. Since the passage of Title IX, overall opportunities for women in coaching have taken a hit and have decreased by 40%, according to a report by the Tucker Center for Research on Girls and Women in Sport.

3. Family Life

- a. Many women coaches start as assistants in their early-to-mid 20s and may have opportunities for promotions in their late-20s to early 30s, which is around the time that they are starting or growing their families. While it is not unusual to see women bring their kids to work, it’s not typical at the collegiate rowing level. Moreover, the hours when the coaches are required to be on the water — before school and/or after school — are around the same times when they are needed at home, whether it’s to get their kids off to school or start dinner and the bedtime routines. In the interviews with Philadelphia-area coaches, family life was one of the main contributors that led to retirement or a pause in their careers.

4. Lack of Mentors, Networking Opportunities, Supportive Resources

- a. With rowing being historically a male-dominated industry, it provides less opportunities for mentorship and networking among women, forcing some coaches to feel isolated and lack support or resources. While there are women and organizations working to provide female representation, role models, and opportunities in the rowing community, it continues to be a work-in-progress and is often a grassroots effort.

5. COVID-19 burnout and changes

- a. The pandemic shifted the perspective of work-life balance and the role that coaches play on and off the river. The pandemic also reportedly changed the coaching pool, impacting the talent pool and quality of applicants. The ongoing challenges of the pandemic and changes from COVID-19 puts an additional strain and responsibility on the coaches still felt today.

SOLUTIONS

Actionable steps, goals, and proposed milestones allow women's coaching careers to be sustainable and less challenging. One of the easiest solutions proposed is to continue the conversation of equity in sports, as well as keeping the topic of women leaders a daily focus and working closely with school administrators to prioritize and make women a top goal within the department. "Change doesn't happen overnight. It takes a lot of work from a lot of people," shares former Temple University assistant coach Julia Rorer.

Below are additional solutions and proposed efforts to help create small but impacting change.

- Be the Representation
  - Support not only women coaching women, but also encourage women coaching men. While it is common to see a male head coach of a woman's rowing team, it is unusual to see women coaching boys or men's rowing teams. Women coaching men needs to be normalized and approached with the same attitude as men applying for coaching positions of women's teams.
- Set an Example
  - Show younger girls and women that they can overcome the challenges of becoming a head coach by being an example and setting a standard you prefer. For example, bring kids to the boathouse and show others that they can have a family and a successful career at the same time. Set up designated spaces at regattas for families and women with kids to feel safe.
- Share Resources
  - Share resources such as training courses, data, research, and educational information through various means that provide support to women who are interested in coaching, retaining and growing their careers, and help women navigate and advance their coaching paths.
- Hire Women
  - Hire more women leaders in the athletic departments to support the hiring, mentoring, and retaining of female head coaches. Also, work more closely with athletic departments to set diversity goals and provide resources to women coaches and the financial/physical/mental support needed to continue in their leadership positions while also starting/raising/growing a family.
- Ensure Pay Equity
  - Increase women's salaries and provide fair pay and liveable wages to all coaches, including assistants, enabling a more sustainable and long-term career path.

- Attend Networking Opportunities
  - Get involved with groups and organizations that are already doing the work, including WeCOACH | Women Coaches Organization. All Sports. All Levels. (wecoachsports.org), Gender Equity Task Force - NCAA.org, and social media networks, like the Alliance of Women's Coaches Facebook group, which posts job opportunities for women coaches. Attend and sponsor conferences, like The Women's Coaching Conference in Boston, that provide networking events, community-building opportunities, and actionable steps that help women advance in their coaching careers.
- Start Mentorship Programs
  - Initiate mentorship programs that involve other coaches or approach individuals to participate in a mentor/mentee relationship, which can include student-athletes. Provide a plan to become a coach, retain a coach, promote a coach, or advance a coach's career, and follow that plan with goals and scheduled check-ins. Most of the coaches interviewed for this story said they became involved with coaching due to one of their former coaches and mentors encouraging them and making them believe they could do it.
- Continue the Conversation
  - Set goals and milestones that will help encourage continued conversations of coaching equity and diversity. Engage with women at networking events and share your story. Share your story and resources with other women digitally and join social media groups like Alliance for Women Coaches and Women of the Row to contribute to and continue the conversation.
- Show the Support
  - Recognize women and female coaches who are making a difference, especially those in your life who have made a positive impact and have provided support, guidance, and mentorship. Pay it forward by applauding and supporting the women coaches around you, whether that's through sharing a social media post, giving a donation to their charity, or showing up to their in-person event. By applauding strong female leaders and encouraging them, it makes a tremendous impact.

Use the above steps as actionable goals, prioritizing monthly check-ins with your sports team, department, and networks. Keep the conversation going by emailing mauramkennedy@gmail.com, sending any additional resources that can be shared with the women's rowing community.

Self-Guided Walk of Boathouse Row

By Dotty Brown, author of Boathouse Row, Waves of Change in the Birthplace of American Rowing

This tour starts at Lloyd Hall, #1 Boathouse Row.

Map by Margo Angelopoulos

BOATHOUSE ROW DATES FROM 1859, when Philadelphia ordered the rowing clubs to tear down their unsightly garage-like boathouses and rebuild in stone. One and a half houses survive from that era – the northern portion of #2 Boathouse Row (the Fairmount Rowing Association) and #14 Boathouse Row (Philadelphia Girls Rowing Club).

Ten years later, another city edict required that new construction be architecturally picturesque. The potpourri of architectural styles on the Row today – ornamental Victorian Gothic, Eastlake, Colonial Revival, Mediterranean—all date from between 1861 and 1904.

Some of the clubs fly banners of universities and high schools that lease space from the private clubs.

#1 Boathouse Row: Lloyd Hall

In 1997, Lloyd Hall replaced Plaisted Hall. Built in 1881 to honor professional rower and coach Fred Plaisted, it was the only public boathouse on the Row. Today's building houses a café and basketball courts but no public boathouse – something the City would like to build.

Walk across the café patio, down the steps and look to your right. The long boat shed is home to Philadelphia City Rowing, which trains city youth to row. To your left is the 1821 dam that flattened the river, allowing rowing

#2 and #3: Fairmount Rowing Association

Fairmount regards itself as a club of blue-collar men. Its 19th century records show members included a carpenter, blacksmith, brew master, bricklayer, weaver, electrician, and linotype operator. It admitted women in the 1990s.

Fairmount's boathouse incorporates both the oldest and newest buildings on the Row. The right-hand side, with a small peaked roof, dates from 1861. It is half of what was originally a "twin." The Fairmount Rowing Association in 1881 bought the left-hand side of the twin from a defunct club and replaced it in 1904 with the brick building you see today. In the 1940s, Fairmount bought the remaining 1861 half and connected the two buildings.

#4: Pennsylvania Barge Club

Within a decade of its founding in 1861, the Pennsylvania Barge Club was basking in the victories of rower Max Schmitt, famously painted by Schmitt's Central High School classmate, Thomas Eakins in The Champion Single Sculls, now hanging at New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art. Eakins lived six blocks from the river and was himself a rower. Some of Eakins' rowing paintings are at the Philadelphia Museum of Art.

Another Pennsylvania Barge champion was Ernest Bayer whose wife, Ernestine, brought women's rowing to the Schuylkill in 1938 (See #14 Philadelphia Girls Rowing Club.)

The Barge Club building, with Victorian East Lake elements, was built in 1892. That renovation replaced the Barge Club's half of the original 1871 building it shared with Crescent next door. The Barge Club building was home to the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen (now USRowing) and the Dad Vail (the nation's largest small-college regatta). The Adaptive Rowing Association is also based here.

#5: Crescent Boat Club

The Crescent Boat Club resulted from the merger of the Iona and Pickwick barge clubs in 1867. It immediately built a twin stone boathouse with the Pennsylvania Barge Club. In the 1870s, Crescent innovatively used steel beams to expand from two bays to three. It also placed its entrance off center to be more picturesque than earlier boathouses. Twenty years later, architects added neo-Tudor post-and-beam details and raised the roof.

Like all of the rowing clubs, which are private and sustained only by their members, Crescent has had costly repair issues. In the 1970s, the Philadelphia Inquirer wrote, "The sky is visible through sections of the rotting roof. Ceilings on the second and third floor are falling in."

#6: Bachelors Barge Club

The Bachelors Barge Club, formed in 1853, is the country's oldest rowing club in continual existence, with rituals just as ancient. For instance, each initiate gets a single syllable nickname. (W. Atlee Burpee's nickname was "Seed.") Members still gather for dinners at the Button—their upriver social house at 4501 Kelly Drive.

Bachelors' Mediterranean-style boathouse, a replacement built in 1893, broke ground architecturally by using brick instead of stone. Its wide Italianate balcony facing Kelly Drive is an example of the Row's architectural one-upmanship.

#7 and #8: University Barge Club

UBC was formed by graduates of the University of Pennsylvania in 1854 but has never been Penn's official rowing club. (That would be #11, the College Boat Club.)

This double boathouse, built in 1870, was once home to two clubs. During the Depression, its sister club failed, and University took over the entire building.

UBC members in 1970 created the Thomas Eakins Head of the Schuylkill Regatta (HOSR). Club volunteers manage this contest, with more than 8,000 competitors each October.

Note the green serpentine stone, quarried in West Chester, PA. Renovations in 1891 added elaborate woodwork, high chimneys and a high pitched roof. In 1990, it reconfigured its locker rooms to make space for women.

#9: Malta Boat Club

The Malta Boat Club was founded in 1860 by seven men belonging to the Sons of the Knights of Malta. The only remaining connection is the white Maltese cross on the blades of its blue oars.

In 1873, the Malta and the Vesper boat clubs built two identical attached houses before diverging architecturally. In 1901, George and William Hewitt, disciples of Frank Furness, raised Malta up to three stories, the tallest on the Row. Also distinguishing Malta is its decision to remain the Row's only all-male club.

#10: Vesper Boat Club

The Vesper Boat Club is the only private boat club in the nation to win gold in three Olympics with its eight-oared crew: 1900, 1904, and 1964. It is also the club of actress Grace Kelly's family. Her father, John B. Kelly Sr., won Olympic gold medals in 1920 and 1924. (He is the rower in the sculpture at the upriver reviewing stands). Her brother, John B. Kelly Jr., won twice at Henley; Kelly Drive is named for him.

In the late 1960s, Vesper was among the first clubs to admit women, some of whom rowed in the eight that won a bronze medal in 1976, the first Olympics with women's crew.

#11: College Boat House

In 1872, students at the University of Pennsylvania organized a crew program and raised money for one of the most luxurious boathouses of its time, with a trend-setting upstairs lounge. The building's central section, portion, with three arched windows, is the original structure. Wings were added later on the left and right sides for more boat bays. Major renovations in 2022 modernized the interior but maintained its exterior design.

With dynamic coaches, including Ellis Ward, Rusty Callow, Joe Burk, Ted Nash, and Stan Bergman, Penn crew has been a strong national competitor.

#12: Pennsylvania Athletic Club Rowing Association

The roots of "PennAC" go back to 1871, when men living in West Philadelphia started a club below the Fairmount Dam. It moved upriver with an 1878 building – the first with a balcony facing the river where members could watch the boating scene. In 1924, the club was taken over by the downtown Pennsylvania Athletic Club, which renamed it.

PennAC's "Big Eight" won world acclaim with 31 straight victories from 1929 to 1931. Penn AC expanded in the 1960s with an unimaginative addition, seen on the right side. In the 1980s, a second floor was added to make room for women's lockers.

#13: Undine Barge Club

Designed by Frank Furness in 1882, the Undine Barge Club, with its many balconies, turrets, and playful use of geometric forms, is the most dramatic on Boathouse Row. It was conceived as a masculine building to reflect its occupants. Note the building's colors: Furness (who designed the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts) saw reds and greens as "the colors of nature." The Latin inscription carved in stone means, "Work itself is a pleasure."

Undine's corner balcony was the first to face Kelly Drive, built as the clubs became social spaces, with elegant upstairs lounges. Here, the men could watch carriages and bicyclists on the drive, while passersby could see the manly rowers upstairs.

#14: Philadelphia Girls Rowing Club

Completed in 1861, this Italianate stone building is the oldest intact structure on the Row. It was built for the Philadelphia Skating Club in a colder era when thousands would skate on the river. Thomas Eakins' father was a founding member and Eakins considered himself an accomplished skater. In summer, the Skating Club rented to rowing clubs.

In 1938, a group of women secretaries and clerks took over the building and launched America's first competitive women's rowing club. Members of the Philadelphia Girls Rowing Club (PGRC) campaigned to include women's rowing in the Olympics. PGRC remains all-women and is open to women of "all sizes, shapes, and ages" who want to row.

#15: Sedgely

Sedgely started in 1897 when women asked Fairmount Park for a place where, like the men, they could relax and have teas after exercising in the park. Their clubhouse was built in 1902, incorporating the existing lighthouse into its living room. It has never been a rowing club.

The club opens to the public every August on Lighthouse Day.

Preserving Rowing History: The Work Goes On

SINCE 2020, THOSE OF US WHO PRODUCE THE ZOOM STORY HOURS for the 50 Stories Project, in honor of the 50th anniversary of HOSR, have dedicated ourselves to preserving the history of rowing. Our team continues to produce about six live Zoom events per year, all of which focus on various aspects of rowing history; not just in Philadelphia, but across the nation. The 50 Stories episodes are very popular, and attract a wide range of enthusiasts and supporters. But that is not all we do. Behind the scenes, we work tirelessly to promote rowing history preservation in Clubs, schools and private collections. We recently released "A Call To Action" urging everyone in the rowing community to preserve and protect important historical objects; these include archives & records, awards, prints, photos, films, boats & equipment, etc. Our goal is to create a "culture" of historical awareness in the community, and to help collection owners adopt straight-forward preservation practices. In addition, we will continue to expand the network of rowing historians who have been doing this work throughout the country and collaborate to lay a sustainable path forward. The reception from Rowing News, Row2k and USRA has been very encouraging, and more media releases will follow.

While many of us play a key role in preserving our individual Club and private collections, we are not professional archivists; so we seek guidance and advice from those who are. We have recently introduced ourselves to several professional organizations who do important works in this field, including:

Temple University Urban Archives Center
Drexel University Lenfest Center
Private Archivists who work on important Philadelphia collections
Philadelphia Area Consortium of Special Collections Libraries
Independence Seaport Museum
Historical Society of Pennsylvania
Philadelphia Water Works

Creating ties and contacts among the professionals in these organizations will help us in our mission. They are extremely supportive, and encouraged us to participate in "Archives Month Philly", which, during October, produces and hosts events relating to history and historical preservation. This past week we participated in a public event at the Free Library of Philadelphia, and hosted an event on Boathouse Row for professionals in the fields of history, preservation, archiving and library science. The event included presentations from us about our work, a brief walking tour of the Row, and plenty of time for Q&A. We see this as being indispensable for meeting our goals; these experts are highly experienced in the matters that interest us, and they are generally well-aware of potential funding sources to support these activities. At the same time, we are exploring creation of our own non-profit entity that would enable us to apply for grants and solicit tax-deductible donations.

The work goes on...as volunteers, the breadth and scale of what we want to accomplish far exceeds the resources we have. So we really have to focus ourselves on doing what's most important. Once Archives Month is behind us, we will turn again to adopting a software platform that would enable enthusiasts to store and display publicly-accessible digital records of important pieces in their collections. And we will, of course, continue to support Clubs and private collectors in their collection management programs. We want to be a welcome resource for all collection owners.

And, of course, we will continue to produce interesting and informative Story Hours to spread the word about the history of our sport, which we care so passionately about.

Rick Stehlik, Malta Boat Club
Chris Doyle, Pennsylvania Barge Club

United We Row: A Seat in the Boat for Everyone

*By Jennie Traves
Chief Community Engagement Officer
US Rowing*

USROWING IS PROUD TO ANNOUNCE an ambitious initiative called United We Row, the purpose of which is to grow our sport by making rowing a more welcoming place for all.

This means reshaping the landscape of American rowing by fostering greater access and competitive opportunities in rowing throughout the country. Through close collaboration with leaders and clubs, we are determined to make the sport more inclusive, diverse, and accessible than ever before. This is not just a campaign; it's a movement to bring the joy and benefits of rowing to everyone.

We do so by providing clubs, coaches, and athletes with the education and support, competition, and advocacy required to pursue rowing from those early novice years to the lifelong veteran. USRowing's three pillars of Experience, Performance, and Inclusion will take the sport from where we are today into a sustainable, long-lasting future. To win at the highest levels – like other businesses – rowing must recruit and retain the best talent in the country.

Previous Work

Since Amanda Kraus took over in 2021, USRowing has been working hard to reestablish trust with membership, build critical infrastructure, and focus on athlete, coach, and broader rowing community member experience. Creating a sense of belonging and valuing athletes irrespective of their background or identity has been a priority. From providing new educational and training opportunities for coaches and leaders, increasing access to scholarships for youth athletes, investing in programs like STEM to Stern to provide access to young people, and expanding membership opportunities for clubs and individuals to join USRowing's community – the organization has invested more than ever. But it is not enough.

Looking Ahead

To reach its fullest potential at all levels of the sport – from winning Gold medals at the Olympic and Paralympic teams to providing rowing to more and more young people at the grassroots – USRowing must do more.

United We Row will provide funding through grants and scholarships, launch the United We Row mentorship program for coaches from underrepresented backgrounds, increase training and educational opportunities, and expand programs to break down barriers to participation in rowing at all levels. These initiatives will act as catalysts for growth — supporting clubs, athletes, coaches, referees, and others in the rowing community.

United We Row Starts with each of you making a commitment to get involved and take action to truly affect change – in your boat, in your club, and in our sport. We can offer a few ways to get started:

- State your commitment: You can sign our pledge which outlines our values and states clearly your intention to take action in your rowing club. To find the pledge, go to USRowing.org → Education → DEI Resources. This pledge signals to your rowing community that embracing a more inclusive sport takes more than simply recruiting people from diverse backgrounds; it entails a simple but ongoing willingness to extend a welcoming smile and embrace new people. It's not hard, but it takes an intention.
- Stay informed with the Community Engagement Newsletter by emailing community@usrowing.org to join. As our initiative garners support, we will pass along new ideas and strategies to support rowing clubs in their efforts, share progress, and keep you updated on opportunities for training and resources. We don't have all the answers, so as our movement takes hold, we look to our rowing membership to see what works and share these ideas.
- Please Support: And importantly, for those with the means, please consider going to USRowing.org to donate to United We Row's initiatives, grants, and scholarships. A small gift can go a long way.

Pledge to be a United We Row advocate. A "hello" or a ride home can go a long way. Take small steps in your boathouse to make it more welcoming. Go to USRowing.org → Education → DEI Resources.

United We Row Mentorship Program.

Mentee applicants will fill out a short survey regarding their interests and growth areas to be paired with a mentor fitting their needs. If you or someone you know are interested in becoming a mentor, please email community@usrowing.org

United We Row Scholarship Program.

Are you or someone you know a coach or interested in becoming one? USRowing offers a scholarship program that allows any USRowing registered coach from an underrepresented community to enroll in our Level 2 Coaching Certification free of charge. Applicants should have about 4 years of rowing experience and some coaching experience. Email community@usrowing.org to get the application.

On view in the Roberts Gallery, this exhibition of more than 50 paintings explores Laurencin's career that defined 1920s Paris.

Sophie Socha: A Major Force on Boathouse Row Since the 1960's

By Merry Jones

IN 1961, VERONICA SOCHA, an accomplished oarswoman on the Schuylkill, asked her sister Sophie, "Do you want to try rowing?"

Neither suspected that that one question would change Sophie Socha's life, let alone that it would affect the course of U.S. women's rowing.

In fact, when Sophie accepted the invitation, coming down to the river and getting into a wooden Wherry gig (much wider than today's gigs), she wasn't sure that she'd want to stick with rowing.

"It took three years," she remembers, seated in the airy great room of her boathouse. "Because there were no formal lessons then. I had to learn on my own. But I stuck with it, and once I learned, I couldn't stop."

She also couldn't compete. Although men competed in boat clubs all along Boathouse Row and beyond, the only competition for women then was within her own boat club, Philadelphia Girls Rowing Club (PGRC). Members of PGRC, where Sophie has served as president for years, raced each other during the 50's and 60's until, in the early 60's, when Vesper Boat Club started a women's crew.

Then, in 1965-66, the National Women's Rowing Association was born. PGRC joined and was able to compete, but the only other women's clubs were on the West coast. Sophie bowed an eight that raced in Lake Merritt, California, and Green Lake, Washington. In alternate years, those crews raced on the Schuylkill. Three locations. That was it for women's racing.

But Sophie and her boatmates kept at it and, in 1967, the PGRC crew that Sophie bowed won Women's Nationals Regatta in Lake Merritt. That victory made them eligible to compete in the Women's European Championships in Vichy, France.

For the first time ever, a US women's team would compete abroad. "What an opportunity!" she recalls. "We were out of our minds with excitement. We could scarcely believe it." And Sophie would be bow. In six years of rowing, she had progressed from wobbling in a gig to bowing an eight in international competition. She was ecstatic, but "there was just one problem."

"I was three months pregnant." If anyone affiliated with the race found out, no question. She would be tossed out of the boat. "Back then," she says, "times were different. Pregnant women weren't supposed to do anything the least bit strenuous, let alone race an eight. So, of course, I didn't tell anyone. I didn't dare."

Determined not to miss the first ever US women's international rowing opportunity, Sophie kept her secret. "We came in dead last," she says. "But that race mattered. It opened the door for US women's competition abroad. Of course, we had no idea we were doing anything historically significant. We just did it because we loved it." (Her baby, the first of two, was born perfectly healthy in 1968.)

After that international competition, Sophie devoted herself to domestic women's rowing.

"Our club was founded on May 4, 1938, by seventeen women. But it wasn't counted as a player by the other clubs. We weren't even included in the Schuylkill Navy for decades, until the 60's. But we were determined to be involved and do our part as equals.

Today, Sophie says, PGRC has become an integral and well-respected part of Boathouse Row. Through her involvement there, she has become a force in the development of women's rowing. "Our boat club was one of the first homes anywhere in the U.S. for women rowers. We were an anomaly. But, we've persisted. And over the years, women have so successfully infiltrated rowing that the scales have tipped. Today, I think we have as many, if not more woman than men in the sport."

For Sophie, though, rowing is much more than just a sport. PGRC has become like a second home. She has served in various positions on the board there, continuously since 1966. And during the years of her presidency, PGRC's capital campaign has flourished. She's overseen multiple projects for the care and upkeep of the house. Most recently, the exterior has been repointed, the windows and boat bays redone. "We do this not just for PGRC and Boathouse Row, but for all of Philadelphia, and beyond. We occupy an historical building, listed in Philadelphia's, Pennsylvania's and national registries. Being here is an honor, and it brings responsibilities."

If PGRC's building is important to Sophie, even more so are its members. "I love these women. We've grown to 110 members, and about 85 of us row regularly. Beyond rowing, we take pride in helping at regattas and other projects along the Row. Each and every one of our members does her part. We are all bound by our history and committed to this special rowing club, a place just for women."

Looking ahead, Sophie plans to continue welcoming women rowers to PGRC, especially novice classes who will continue the boathouse's unique community. "When our members walk in the door, they should feel that they are entering a safe haven. That they are home."

While Sophie particularly values PGRC, she loves the entire sport of rowing. "Personally, I don't know who I'd be or where I'd have ended up if not for rowing. It made me who I am today. Through good times and bad, I've had rowing. At times, I was so connected to rowing that it scared me. It was like an addiction, so intense that I actually made myself stop. By the end of a week, though, I was miserable and had to come back. I needed the focus, the discipline, the solitude. Rowing makes you leave your cares on the dock, drop everything else, and concentrate on each stroke."

Looking to the future, Sophie would like the clubs along Boathouse Row to consolidate their histories and create a unified rowing museum. "It would attract people from all over the world. There are so many stories to tell. An effort is already underway to digitize the Row's pictures and memorabilia. But I'd like to see a physical museum where visitors can see exhibits and collections of actual three dimensional rowing relics."

Sophie is also pressing the US Rowing Association to encourage more non-elite rowers to take up or continue rowing. She'd like to see new clubs created all across the country, and, with this goal in mind, has researched the cost of locations, boats, launches and insurance. "Starting new clubs can be affordable and doable. It will just take determination." She wants to grow the sport and make it more inclusive, essentially asking people all across the country the same question that got her started: "Do you want to try rowing?"

For those who do try it (or return after a hiatus), she has this advice. "Rowing takes time. So, give yourself that time. Keep at it. Be active in a club, join the community. Don't feel you have to compete, at least not until you're ready. It's okay to just keep rowing. Most of all, row with duck feathers—let your troubles roll off your shoulders, and take another stroke."

As for Sophie Socha's future? She looks out the window of the boathouse she has called home since 1961. "I'm not going anywhere. As long as there's a lot to do, I'm here to help do it. Besides I can't imagine life without rowing. It has seen me through thick and thin, ups and downs. Whatever else has happened in my life, rowing has been and will remain a constant. No matter what comes my way, I'll always plop into a boat."

Clete Graham: A Tribute from the NDames

AS WE CONTINUE TO CELEBRATE 50 YEARS of Title IX enabling women's crews all over the country to not just exist, but thrive, we thought it also a great time to celebrate a coach who was instrumental in starting women's rowing at the University of Notre Dame (while still a student himself) .... A man many of you also know and love if you've been around Philly's Boathouse Row and the Head of the Schuylkill over the past 40 years .... Clete Graham!

Anyone who's heard that distinctive "Clete voice" from a launch, a starter boat, the awards dock or the banks of the river, can't miss it! In fact, whatever regatta arena we're at with Clete there is always someone who pretty much says exactly that .... "I KNOW that voice!"

Many know that he is currently the head coach of rowing at Concord High School in Wilmington and in the 80's along with a stint back at ND, he coached the women's crew of St. Joseph University, but there's so much more to Clete's story.

50 years ago, in the fall of 1973, Clete recruited some avid women (many of whom did not know a thing about rowing, but always up for a challenge) to join the Notre Dame Rowing Club. None of us in those early years had rowing experience, so he had his work cut out for him to say the least. What you might be surprised to learn is that 40 years later (now 10 years ago) many of these women reunited to row as the "NDames" Masters and asked Clete to once again be their coach. Never one to turn down a new rowing venture (or an opportunity to reunite with old friends) and having no idea what kind of shape we were in, Clete showed up.

In 2022, as a tribute and acknowledgement of the women and coaches who paved the way for women's varsity sports at Notre Dame, they were awarded Honorary status in the prestigious ND Monogram Club, which is primarily reserved for varsity athletes. While initially the university was only going to acknowledge the athletes, they were strongly lobbied by the women to include the coaches who meant so much along the way and still do. We were thrilled that the university shared our belief that women's rowing at Notre Dame would not have gotten going then without Clete, his love for the sport and his belief in us. It was agreed that he deserved the Honorary Monogram award every bit as much as the athletes he coached.

NDames is primarily made up of women who rowed as students at Notre Dame or Saint Mary's College back in the 70's and 80's. We've also adopted a few women who have spent their careers at ND and we now even have graduates from the 90's, prior to women's rowing becoming a varsity sport at ND. The camaraderie is amazing among old friends and new friends. Clete is instrumental in sparking that in every one of the women who have been able to come back and row. His enthusiasm for rowing is contagious. In the past 10 years, many of the NDames have become more skilled rowers and have joined local clubs across the country. Here they've crossed paths with many people who just happen to know a guy named Clete!

Because of Clete, we have traveled from Seattle, California, Michigan, the Hudson Valley, Vero Beach and points in between to race in the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta for the past 10 years.

Because of Clete, we've been lucky enough to row out of Philadelphia's historic Boathouse Row and have met innumerable wonderful people associated with the rowing world, including meeting annually with the always impressive Vesper Masters women over coffee. He has been so much more than just a coach. All of us consider him to be our dear friend.

Thank you Clete! We love you and are so proud to call you our coach these many years.

"Let's Have A Chat (GPT)"

By Rich Phillips

PERHAPS SENSING THIS, WHEN ELLEN CARVER asked if I would write a piece again this year, she mentioned that perhaps I would do something that addresses how something really old and really cool (rowing) might be impacted by something really new and really cool (artificial intelligence). I thought that sounded like a great topic. Also, given the ridiculousness of my past writing, I was so shocked that she asked me to write anything, that I just said yes.

And then I actually had to think about the question. Nothing came to mind. And so I thought some more. Still nothing. And then my little human brain got tired, as little human brains sometimes do. So I did the most human of things. I gave up. But since it is 2023, I didn't just call Ellen back to say I couldn't do it. I asked Chat GPT. What follows is a more or less verbatim account of what followed.

Me: Hey AI, Ellen wants me to write about your impact on rowing. Do you think you'll change the sport?

Chat GPT: AI is likely to impact rowing in various ways. It could be used to analyze and optimize techniques, provide real-time performance feedback, and help with injury prevention by monitoring athletes' movements. Additionally, AI might aid in designing more efficient training programs and even enhance the fan experience through data-driven insights and virtual simulations

Me: Well that's rather boring. This is supposed to be a lighthearted piece. Can you tell a joke or somethi—wait a second, you can actually WATCH me row?

Chat GPT: Yes, AI can analyze rowing technique by processing video footage of rowers. Computer vision algorithms can track body positions, movements, and angles to assess factors like stroke efficiency, posture, and rhythm.

Me: That's terrifying. Let's forget about the rowers for a second. Can you improve the rowing experience for fans? Come to think of it, does rowing even have fans? Or just beleaguered-yet-loyal family members?

Chat GPT: Yes, rowing events are watched by a broader audience beyond just the family members of participants. Rowing competitions, especially at the Olympic level and major international regattas, attract spectators, enthusiasts, and fans of the sport.

Me: Yeah, well, I am not going to the Olympics any time soon. Does anyone actually want to watch ME specifically?

Chat GPT: Not everyone may have a personal interest in watching you row specifically.

Me: At least you're honest. What about my teammates? Will AI change the human connection we all love?

AI is unlikely to diminish the feeling of competition and the desire to win in rowing or any other sport. AI's role is more to support and augment the competitive spirit rather than replace it.

Me: Again. Boring. You do not seem so scary any more. What about the party afterwards? Can you at least help with that?

Chat GPT: AI is not likely to have a direct impact on the post-race celebrations or the social aspects of rowing. If anything, AI might indirectly contribute by helping athletes and coaches improve their performance, leading to more satisfying victories to celebrate.

Me: Booorrring. Have you no sense of humor?

Chat GPT: What do you call a rower who keeps losing their oars? A "row"-grettable rower.

(Note: this joke is bad enough that I feel compelled to reiterate—this was Chat GPT's actual response.)

Me: Oh good heavens. I am less and less worried about you taking over rowing, let alone the world.

Chat GPT: Why did the rowing team bring an extra oar to the race? In case they wanted to make a "paddle" shift!

(Same: This was actually what it said.)

Me: That's awful. Let's wrap this up, shall we? Can you say something nice about our beloved HOSR?

Chat GPT: Absolutely! The Head of the Schuylkill Regatta, celebrating its 53rd anniversary, is a testament to the enduring spirit of rowing and the dedication of its organizers, participants, and supporters. Over the decades, this prestigious event has not only showcased the beauty of the Schuylkill River but has also fostered a sense of camaraderie and competition among rowers from around the world. Here's to half a century of rowing excellence and the countless memories created along the Schuylkill's historic waters!

Me: Well said.

A letter from Caitlin Mance. Executive Director Philadelphia City Rowing...

The Recovery is the Most Important Part of the Stroke

My coach often told me: the recovery is the most important part of the stroke. It's where we gather resources, refine our implementation, and get mentally set for the next stroke. Over the past 14 years of strokes, PCR has grown to appreciate the value of a strong recovery.

PCR is not just a youth rowing organization; it is a high-impact youth development initiative dedicated to using rowing as a catalyst for positive change in the lives of Philadelphia public school students. Our mission is clear: to create a unique, comprehensive and free after-school enrichment for young people in the school district of Philadelphia by offering competitive rowing, academic mentorship, and wellness education. With an emphasis on reaching underserved communities, PCR creates an inclusive environment that helps all young people unlock their true potential and explore the possibilities of their future.

The Recovery

As for all of us, the past few years have brought challenges and disruptions to PCR's programming. In spite of a pandemic, hurricane, and dredging, PCR has remained a resilient and consistent community for the youth we serve. We've taken significant steps to deepen our programs to meet the expanded needs of today's youth. We've opened the doors on our new indoor training and learning facility in Parkside, and we're thrilled to have a footprint that will improve access for those we most want to reach.

The Catch

As we emerge from these challenges, we're facing a potential period of explosive growth. This summer's learn-to-row camps brought some of our longest waitlists ever. Youth and caregivers all over the city are clamoring to enroll in PCR's free programming because they see how we're investing in the youth we serve. We're deepening our programs to increase our impact, but in order to broaden and serve more youth, we urgently need support from rowers like you.

The Drive

Our approach is comprehensive and holistic, combining athletic excellence with academic support, resilience skill-building, nutrition education, and enrichment activities. Through our meticulously structured programs, we aim to improve academic achievement, enhance physical and mental health outcomes, and foster personal development and civic engagement. We offer three distinct programs: a high-dosage high school program, a recreational middle school program, and experiential summer learn-to-row camps. These initiatives successfully engage under-resourced youth, promote overall fitness, and teach healthy habits to students and caregivers alike.

Despite 70% of our participants coming from low-to-moderate-income households and 65% facing two or more risk factors for drop-out, 100% of our seniors have graduated high school on time with plans for a bright future in higher education and pursuing career dreams.

The Finish

What sets PCR apart? All our programs are still offered at no cost to participants and their families. This commitment to accessibility is the cornerstone of our organization's philosophy. Also unlike other youth sports programs in Philadelphia, PCR brings youth from every corner of the city to one site. Year after year, the youth we serve express gratitude for forming connections with people outside their immediate neighborhoods and schools, and share the insights that arise from bringing diverse viewpoints and experiences together.

"Together, together."

To quote another successful Philly coach, we need to be "together, together" to have a successful season at PCR, and that includes each of you. Our aspirations are significant. To continue serving more youth, it's essential that we replace some of our aging fleet. Some boats and launches are older than our coaches, and there aren't parts available to keep them going anymore. Our reality is clear: to provide an equitable rowing experience for young people in the School District of Philadelphia, we must significantly increase our fundraising and replace some of our boats and safety launches.

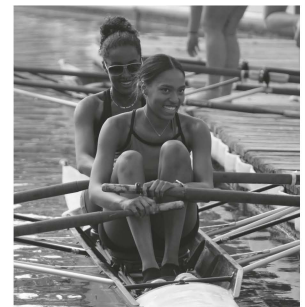

We turn to our cherished community and fellow rowers, like those at the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta, who have been instrumental in our success. Whether you're cheering from the river bank, volunteering your time, or supporting our fundraising efforts directly, we are profoundly grateful for your support over the last decade. As we look to the future and the promising generation of young rowers ready to take the oars, we ask one question: Will you help us make it possible?

Donating is easy! Just head to philadelphiacityrowing.org/give to help keep our services free and increase the number of youth who can take their first strokes on the historic Schuylkill River.

Thank you for being part of our remarkable journey. Together, we will launch towards a brighter future for Philadelphia's youth.

With gratitude and determination,

The Year After

By Merrill Hilf

IT'S A BIT HARD TO BELIEVE THAT I'm still talking about dredging, but it's true, it's still going on. Apparently, the dredge operators have had to stop removing silt, logs, and natural run off items, to pull out tires. There are so many tires, it's difficult to get to the bottom of the river. Enough tires to outfit most of the city owned cars, maybe even save the fleet some money. It's a mystery why there are so many tires in the river. If you've spent any amount of time rowing in Philadelphia, you've witnessed the occasional car in the river, mostly after losing control on Kelly Drive, for various reasons. Surely the tires don't fall off when the cars are pulled from the river. Maybe there is some annual tire throwing event upriver, that I'm not aware of.

So as the dredge guys (as they are known) continue their mission, we are left with less river to row on, changing traffic patterns, and large immovable objects to dodge. At the same time, the high schools and colleges have all returned to the river, leaving the peacefulness of August behind. In general, people are Covid weary, now that the latest strain of the virus has a slim chance of killing them, people have thrown out their masks, returned to eating out, and coughing and yelling at each other in close quarters. That includes locker rooms, sports bars, and public transportation. And everybody back in team boats. It wasn't that long ago, people were struggling to get their hands on a single so they could keep rowing, or erging on Zoom.

The rowing community moves on, as life moves on, and masters rowers change age categories. For me, priorities have shifted as I age. There's been no return to work woes, unlike the workforce at large (remote has become hybrid), since healthcare workers like myself, never stopped working, there's just less of us. Unfortunately, there's not less work, just less people to do the work. The world seems to be short staffed, short tempered, and our kindness and generosity with each other, short lived. Remember when we celebrated the small victories like buying toilet paper, going to the gym, or getting a haircut? Covid forced technology on everyone, and even my parents learned how to Zoom. Of course, it wasn't perfect, and a lot of the conversation centered around whether they could hear or see us, and the camera often focused on the top of someone's head. I like that boathouse, planning, and community meetings still have a Zoom option. Now when we get tired of each other, a simple click on the screen, and I've left the meeting, no one being the wiser.

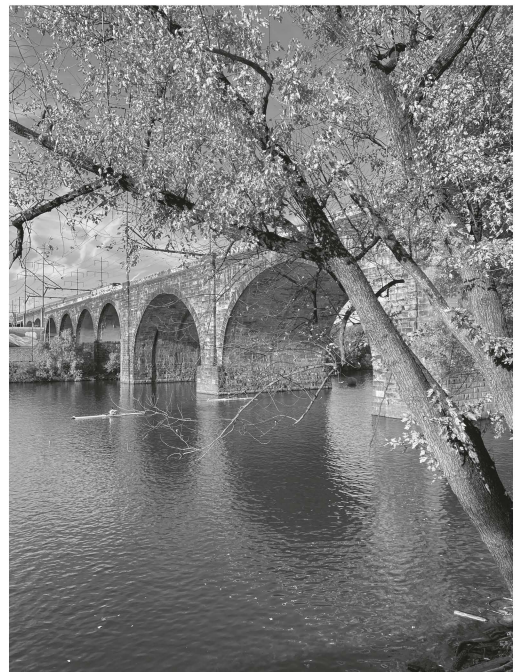

As I watch my parents move into the last phase of their lives, also known as "aging in place" (or "the house is paid for so we'll make the best of it"), I'm grateful that I can use all the skills I've learned during my career, to help them. Getting old for the majority of the population does not mean a new racing category, it just means new challenges for the body and mind. Dredging is going on in my parent's home, just without the heavy equipment. Fortunately, we've found no tires. I just keep reminding myself that it's just stuff, as my childhood "treasures" are thrown in a dumpster along with the 40 year old black and white television that "still works", or the collection of canned goods in the basement from 1996. The solace I have while rowing has become more meaningful, and a feeling I appreciate more and more. It's my hope that all rowers find those moments when all that matters is the next stroke, and all other thoughts, and feelings can wait.

Have a good row, no matter what age group you're in.
