HEAD OF THE SCHUYLKILL
REGATTA
EST. 1970 • PHILADELPHIA

Dear Friends,

It is a great pleasure to welcome competitors and spectators from across the country and around the world to the 52nd Head of the Schuylkill Regatta.

Though the 2022 HOSR may look much like regattas of pre-pandemic years, as other areas in life, it was not left unaffected. Our core priorities – the health and safety of our competitors, coaches and volunteers, and the provision of a fair and competitive race – remain front and center. But how we meet those priorities continues to evolve as we find ways to work smarter and turn our challenges into assets. Many of the changes that we were forced to make during the pandemic and prolonged dredging have been incorporated into our regular operations. You will find food trucks delivering Philly's very best street eats, vendors lining the path, and close-ups of your favorite rowers on our live stream, thanks to creative responses to challenges.

In planning, we pause to reflect on our history, our growth and our commitment to our competitors, spectators, partners, and the City of Philadelphia. Some of you come to compete in the birthplace of American rowing, others return each year for the beauty of the Schuylkill in autumn, some to reunite with former teammates, and more for the competition and the challenge of the course. All however, cognizant or not, become an important part of the tradition of one of the most iconic head races in the country.

Our 2022 program book, in typical fashion, draws on the heart, soul and history of the Schuylkill River rowing community. In particular, we embrace our home, as we mourn the loss and celebrate the lives of legends, pioneers, and friends. It's the people, the ones lost, and the ones who continue to move us, who make this community.

Fittingly, Merry Jones, a regular contributor, begins a new series highlighting The People of Boathouse Row. We honor the 1967 Vichy Eight, hailing from Philadelphia Girls' Rowing Club, on their induction into the National Rowing Foundation's Hall of Fame. Maura Kennedy highlights the shoulders we stand on and how women continue to accumulate "firsts," even on this 50th anniversary of Title IX. Rick Stehlik describes the HOSR 50 Stories initiative, which began as an idea to feature people and events that have formed our path, but has grown into a means of relaying the backstories and connecting the community. As we record our history, we affect our future, as Sabina Louise Pierce displays in Tracing the Historical Journey of Black Rowers in Philadelphia. This year award winning editorial cartoonist Signe Wilkinson features outstanding HOSR volunteer Anselm Sauter, who brings his work ethic and dedication to not only the regatta, but also to University Barge Club, our host club. Merrill Hilf, as always, puts us on the water, with her reminders of the simple reasons we love this sport.

With appreciation to our sponsors and our partners for their continued support, and sincere gratitude to our Board of Directors and our amazing volunteers who truly believe the HOSR is more than just a regatta and are committed to making a difference no matter what the obstacles. Together - WE THANK YOU - for showing up, giving your very best, enjoying this experience with your rowing family, and setting the course for the next 50 years of Philadelphia's Fall Festival of Rowing.

As always, we love to hear from you, our biggest asset; please do not hesitate to reach out to info@hosr.org with any thoughts or ideas.

With gratitude,

Jennifer Wesson

Dear Friends,

Here in Philadelphia, we are excited for the fall. Our leaves are turning, our students are learning, and we are eagerly awaiting the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta, Philadelphia's fall festival of rowing!

It is always a pleasure to welcome the thousands of competitors, coaches, family, and friends to Philadelphia on the last weekend in October. This year, more than ever, Philadelphia remains America's destination city for competitive rowing, hosting more regattas each year than any other racing venue in the United States.

Launched in 1970, the Head of the Schuylkill is the city's largest regatta, with more than 9,000 competitors. Known as a 'racer's race,' there are many long-term and friendly rivalries among high schools, colleges, masters, and rowing clubs that visit from across the country and around the world. Philadelphia is also home to several high-performance training programs as demonstrated by the number of Olympians who have trained here, and continue to train here, on the iconic Schuylkill River.

Watching the growth of the Regatta, on and off the water, I am so proud that it has become much more than a regatta by working year-round to reach out to the greater community, building strong partnerships with the City, Fairmount Park, schools, neighborhoods, businesses, and local artists. The organizing committee works tirelessly, year-round, to ensure that the Regatta is safe, competitive, and fun. The generous support of corporate sponsors, partners, in-kind contributors, and individual donors is very much appreciated.

During your stay, I hope you will make time to visit our cultural attractions and historic landmarks and enjoy our outstanding restaurants. For master rowers, for 20-somethings, for high school and college crews, and their families—there are numerous "off the water" attractions for everyone. Philadelphia, and Philadelphians, welcome you!

My best wishes for an enjoyable and successful regatta.

Sincerely,

James F. Kenney

Welcome,

As Commissioner of Philadelphia Parks & Recreation (PPR), I feel fortunate to welcome competitors, their coaches, friends, and families to Fairmount Park for the 52nd Head of the Schuylkill Regatta, presented by NSM Insurance Group.

We applaud the Regatta board of directors and organizing committee for their countless hours of work on behalf of the entire river community while at the same time planning a safe and successful event. As the largest urban park system in the world, Fairmount Park is never more spectacular than it is this time of year. We hope you will take the time to enjoy the perfect fall backdrop the Park provides for the 9,000+ athletes who compete on the challenging 2.4-mile headrace course.

The Schuylkill River has a long and storied history in Fairmount Park. As the Park's steward, PPR is dedicated to providing a first-class racing venue and an experience competitors and coaches will long remember. As we continue the very important, and much needed, dredging project, our top priority remains keeping the river safe for all recreational users and the many regattas for which Philadelphia is famous.

We thank the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta for their efforts to showcase the Park, the River and the City to all of their supporters. We are especially grateful for their ongoing efforts to host numerous 'clean up days' throughout the year; develop event protocols for waste; and the many efforts to include the river communities in this work. Our special thanks to the Regatta's sponsors, in-kind contributors, donors, and partners for their continued support. We all know that it really does take a village!

We hope you will take time to explore the historic landmarks and statues along the racecourse and enjoy Philadelphia during this glorious season. Thank you for your commitment to rowing and the greater rowing community. These past few years have taught us the importance of working together to overcome challenges and build a better future. Enjoy the weekend!

Sincerely,

Mobilizing to Save the Schuylkill River

By Nathan Boon, Senior Program Officer for Watershed Protection, William Penn Foundation

THE TREMENDOUS SPORT OF ROWING relies wholly on our ability to safely access waterways that are clean enough to be used regularly for recreation. Luckily for us, for the past 50 years, "recreational use" designation for rivers has been enshrined in federal law through the U.S. Clean Water Act, the landmark 1972 legislation that asserted our right to fishable, swimmable waterways.

In recent decades, once heavily degraded urban rivers like our own Schuylkill, host to this 52nd HOSR, have staged a remarkable comeback. While staying attuned to the hazards that still include the occasional log or tree stump, a row down the course no longer invites the prospect of snapping a blade off on a derelict oil drum. With enforceable water quality standards and pollution limits, we've seen our urban waterways spring back to life.

But the vast improvements realized through the U.S. Clean Water Act's bold institutional controls are only part of what's needed to keep this river healthy. These legally mandated gains have occurred side-by-side an entirely separate class of voluntary efforts by non-government and non-profit organizations like HOSR and the Schuylkill Navy River Stewards Committee. True systems change requires harnessing the power of both individuals and institutions, both voluntary action and progressive regulation.

HOSR has achieved international recognition for its commitment to stewarding the environmental health of the natural resource to which it owes its name and its existence. The waters of the Schuylkill River rowing basin above Fairmount dam were once rendered unusable by coal dust prior to massive government mandated and publicly funded cleanup. More recent decades have seen the river plagued by single-use plastics litter and sediment from upstream erosion, while its banks have been choked out by invasive vines.

Long stewards of the racing course, the HOSR planning committee members have taken their efforts to a whole new level in the last ten years to address these challenges. They led the mass mobilization of volunteers for clean ups and other labor-intensive activities, and they also made institutional changes like bans on single use plastic water bottles, first for the Regatta, then for all the clubs along boathouse row year-round. Appreciating the scale of the issue, the rowing community was quick to enlist additional partners in this work, leveraging the Philadelphia Water

Department's Drink Philly Tap campaign (encouraging less consumption of plastic bottled water) and its Philly RiverCast tool (tracking the pollution levels of the river day by day), and partnering with Philadelphia Parks & Rec in the care and maintenance of the adjacent parklands through workforce collaborations like PowerCorpsPHL.

The Schuylkill River rowing community understood the need to exercise what control it could as a steward for the 3-mile stretch of the Schuylkill River it calls home. But the rowing community is also a small but important part of a larger river basin that warrants a watershed-based approach to managing this natural resource. The 3-mile rowing course is just one section of the 135-mile Schuylkill River stretching through dozens of communities across over 180 tributary streams.

It's the decisions of those communities and landowners upstream that have the most profound effect on our experience with the rowing course here above the Fairmount dam. Upstream land use, soil management, runoff, and erosion – when unmanaged, are the principal drivers today behind river pollution downstream, including the sediment load that precipitated the current river depth crisis. The current Schuylkill dredging project promises to secure the future of this section of river for recreation, but only if equally accompanied by sound resource management decisions upstream.

In my role as a grant officer at the William Penn Foundation, I've been privileged to experience a small sliver of the incredible amount of effort the wider Schuylkill River watershed community puts into those upstream practices so that our rowing community can benefit downstream. The William Penn Foundation is a private philanthropic foundation based for 75 years right here in Philadelphia, and for decades the Foundation's grantmaking has included the investment of tens of millions of dollars in the protection and restoration of the Schuylkill River watershed.

Partly with our support, charitable non-profits like Schuylkill River Greenways use science and data to advance a case for the Schuylkill River to be more protected from pollution based on ecological restoration and economic prosperity. Others like the Partnership for the Delaware Estuary have long hosted public-private collaborations through the Schuylkill Action Network. The William Penn Foundation-funded Delaware River Watershed Initiative has united on-the-ground efforts of many of the region's leading science and conservation groups to protect and restore hundreds of acres of upstream forests and streams to benefit clean water.

Many of these solutions require the willing participation of farmers, landowners, and municipal leaders ready to voluntarily adopt best practices for the lands they manage.

They also invite continuation of the institutional controls first effected by the U.S. Clean Water Act through improved permit compliance, and through the efforts of Schuylkill River advocates like PennFuture and Trout Unlimited to upgrade protections for headwater streams like the Perkiomen, Valley Creek, and Little Schuylkill.

And as the water quality conditions continue to improve in the Schuylkill, we see renewed urgency around securing more racially equitable access to and enjoyment of this incredible resource. William Penn Foundation investments in the Alliance for Watershed Education have fostered a network of 23 environmental education centers, including seven right along the Schuylkill River, whose aim is to bring more people to river and by doing so, to build a diverse, equitable constituency for its protection and restoration. Other investments we've made in expanding access to and use of the river extend from the headwaters all the way down to Boathouse Row to include Philadelphia City Rowing and the Fairmount Waterworks, but they also continue below the dam, along the stretch of the Lower Schuylkill still heavily impacted by industry and raw sewage discharge to the oasis that is Bartram's Garden.

So too our rowing community must extend its gaze to those downstream of us: literally, to the receiving waters for any litter or waste we generate at a massive event like HOSR, and metaphorically, to those living in less privileged situations without the means to secure membership to a private club or access to a ten-thousand-dollar piece of equipment.

Rowing is an elite sport, but as demonstrated by local hero John B. Kelly, the original blue-collar oarsman, it cannot and must not be the sole purview of so-called elites. Whether rowing or paddling, fishing or floating, providing safe and equitable recreational river access to a broader and more inclusive population is the only means of ensuring we're building the constituency and assembling the ranks necessary to continue HOSR's rich tradition of river stewardship for the next fifty years.

Down in the Mud with HOSR Volunteer Anselm Sauter

By Signe Wilkinson

THE HOSR REGATTA KNOWS how to treat its elite athletes.

Longtime HOSR organizer Mitch Budman recalls longtime HOSR volunteer and gold-medal-collector Anselm Sauter's first glamorous regatta job. According to Mitch, "Anselm threw straw bales off a truck and spread them across all the really muddy areas."

When reminded about his expert straw tossing, Anselm said dryly, "It was not top of my favorite jobs. It was right up there with replacing toilet paper in all the portapotties."

Anselm's wife, Leigh, recalls it from a different angle. Every year the regatta weekend coincides with their children's birthdays when she is left at home entertaining 3 kids—the youngest of whom was born just days after the 2013 regatta was over. The rare upside for her was bringing them to the regatta where, she recalls, "our boys loved rolling around in the straw that Anselm tossed and riding in the golf carts with him."

Did we mention that one of Anselm's other notable talents (along with distributing tables, speakers, generators, lighting and radios with 8 different frequencies) is driving golf carts? Aside from ferrying his delighted kids, he'd stop to help anyone along the course. He wouldn't just give directions. "If someone was lost, I'd find out where they wanted to go and then offer them a ride in the golf cart. Relations with people behind the scenes was what I enjoyed most about the regatta."

His ambassadorial attitude comes from his love of rowing and of Philadelphia. He rowed at St. Joe's Prep School for four years, competing in the HOSR for two. He still has those regatta T-shirts. He went on to row at Brown University where he graduated double majoring in Business and International Relations with a focus on political economy and development. Unfortunately, after 2 years, 2 herniated discs in his back sidelined his rowing career, he thought for life.

Several years after returning to Philadelphia, a friend invited Anselm to dinner with "Mr. Hill" who had been a memorably involved supporter of St. Joe's rowing while Anselm had been a student. Mr. Hill, "J" to his adult friends, encouraged Anselm to try rowing again at Mr. Hill's University Barge Club. After gingerly getting back on the water, Anselm joined UBC in 2009, began racking up medals at the races and eventually served 3 years as University Barge Club's President where he navigated the club through Covid, recovered from Hurricane Ida and oversaw some major renovations. Mr. Hill comments on the adult Anselm, "He's just a lovely guy. Sagacious, and I respect his judgment."

Off the water, Anselm serves as Director for Federal and State Government Affairs at the Chamber of Commerce of Philadelphia where he's interested in economic growth but also the importance of people. His attitude at work is reflected in his approach to the HOSR where he says, "People recognize Philadelphia as an important epicenter of rowing. Our HOSR volunteers represent the city of Philadelphia. The regatta has a welcomeness and I felt it was my job to make that come through to competitors, families and spectators. We want to make sure it shows the city as best as possible."

Always the hometown booster, Anselm says, "Can you tell the history of Philadelphia without the sport of rowing? It makes up who we are, for sure!" And he adds, "I get the feeling that the regatta has a culture and spirit unmatched by other regattas."

Anselm Sauter's care for athletes, families and visitors is a big reason why.

Jim Barker

Father. Grandfather. Great grandfather. Friend.
Coach extraordinaire.

Jim Barker carved his own path in life. He didn't care about going right while the crowd went left. As with all true originals, the world will never know another of his kind.

Everything that Jim accomplished or helped others accomplish in his remarkable life he did so with integrity, loyalty, grit, humor and humility. To know Jim was to know you were in the presence of greatness, particularly because he'd be the last person to admit to it.

Have a Good Row

By Merrill Hilf

AFTER TWO AND A HALF YEARS OF COVID and Covid related reality, the HOSR once again invites the rowing community to spend a weekend in Philadelphia, hopefully enjoying good weather (who knows after a very hot summer), good racing, and unmasked social interactions. There will be less talk about vaccines and boosters, working remotely, and who's going to school in person. We will return to typical regatta banter: who didn't make weight, who's family drove in from out of town to see their kid row, tricky parts of the course, where the trailer is parked, and if the races are running on time.

All this return to normalcy, and the events over the past year, has got me thinking about a related concept in rowing and life: the idea of fairness. Fairness defined is "impartial and just treatment or behavior without favoritism or discrimination." Yes, I googled it. In all sporting events, there is an assumption that all athletes will abide by the rules and regulations set forth by the sport's governing body. Head races often have additional rules that pertain to registration, penalties, and parking (Philadelphians love to talk about parking). The theory behind these rules is to "level the playing field" as much as possible, and run a fair and just regatta. For example, varsity boats don't race against freshman boats, masters races have age categories to prevent those rowers with less wear and tear, from demoralizing their older counterparts, and novice boats race other novice boats so everyone has the experience of racing, and knowing the joy of finishing. There is something to be said about just challenging yourself, or your crew to perform at the highest level possible, steer a decent course, not hit anything, and cross the finish line.

Life and rowing, is not all about winning. There's a big difference between feeling happy about completing a challenge, even if that's a personal challenge, and needing to win to be happy. We're all aware of great athletes who are winners and have that rare combination of mental toughness and pure physicality to succeed at the highest levels, but are they happy? Simone Biles withdrew from Olympic events for psychological reasons. Michael Phelps battled depression. Naomi Osaka won the U.S. Open, then revealed she struggled with anxiety and depression. These athletes were at the highest levels of competition, very successful, and so we assumed they were also happy. Even Tom Brady has problems (he's quoted as saying "I'm 45, man, it's complicated").

The world we are living in is incredibly stressful: the rising cost of living, climate change, gun violence, global pandemics, weird weather events, war, immigration, post-pandemic driving (i.e. what is a stop sign?), SCOTUS, and homelessness. There's a lot to worry about. To top it off, it's football season, and no matter who you're rooting for, we look to our teams for optimism. Then suddenly, the Queen dies (R.I.P.), and Charles finally gets a job. On a personal note, the Philadelphia rowing community suffered our own losses this year. People who dedicated much of their lives to the sport we all love. I'm sure that Paul Laskow is supervising the dredging of the Schuylkill River from up above, and would be pleased that the project is underway, and in good hands, due in part to his efforts. Many of us turn to rowing for a brief escape from the long list of stressors and worries we all face.

That brings me back to winning. As an unofficial expert at not winning, I can confidently say that it is possible to try your best, not win, and still be happy. Those seemingly trite expressions we've all heard like, "Live each day to the fullest," "Your best is good enough," or "Tomorrow is another day," have more meaning to me now. Now that I am at a time in my life when the words "retirement," "planning," and "senior discount" are commonplace amongst my family and friends, those expressions seem more believable. I challenge you to try these phrases on this weekend. Be the best you can, try your hardest, and wake up tomorrow knowing that it's in the process or attempt, that is good enough. Have a good row.

The Story Behind The Stories: A Journey Through the 50 Year HOSR Lens

By Rick Stehlik

TO STATE THE OBVIOUS, THE LAST TWO YEARS have been challenging from almost every perspective. Rowing, the Philadelphia community, and the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta have not been immune from the effects of the pandemic. When it became apparent that the Regatta would be severely impacted, Jen Wesson, the executive director, asked for the help of several individuals to serve on a committee to create an online forum of events and individuals, which have impacted rowing, particularly in Philadelphia during the first 50 years of the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta, which began in 1970.

The committee consists of Ellen Carver, Dotty Brown, Jim Dietz, Christopher Blackwell, Alan Robinson, Peter Simone, and myself with Jen Wesson as the chair. The first challenge was the scope of the forum. The initial thought was to call it "50 Years of Legends." That quickly became somewhat problematic. How do you define a legend? More importantly, aren't Boathouse Row and its culture more of a collection of shared experiences, from the groups and individuals who contribute at all levels and skills? The history of the Row includes a fascinating timeline of twists and turns, great accomplishments and challenges, and, sometimes, happenings that are stranger than fiction. The stories behind the curtain are the best ones.

As a result of the initial discussions, it was decided that simply "50 Years/50 Stories" would be the appropriate title and scope. In this manner we could draw upon every aspect of the rowing community, asking people to tell their stories and interact with others to share experiences. The chosen format (presented on the new technology of the pandemic - Zoom) was a series of guest speakers, each followed by an open forum of comments and storytelling from those online.

By the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta 2022 there will have been 12 story hours. The breath of topics has been staggering, and the participation for each online gathering has been amazing, often numbering over 100 participants for each with sessions lasting up to 90 minutes. All are available on the HOSR website for viewing.

We have seen in the last two to three years the passing of some truly significant individuals from the scene. Some familiar, and perhaps Legends in one sense, but also several who were the bedrock of the Philadelphia rowing community. The recent passing of Jim Barker is a prime example from all perspectives, but also Joe Sweeney, Ted Nash, Paul Laskow, John Hartigan, Tom Dowd, Robin Jones, John Izzard, and Fred Leonard, to name a few. I mention these passings because it underscores the need to tell their stories, to record them for posterity, and to preserve our heritage in the physical form of the buildings, documents and artifacts.

So, let's review what has been done and how a collection of diverse topics and individuals is greater than the sum of its parts, and becomes the true Story of Philadelphia Rowing.

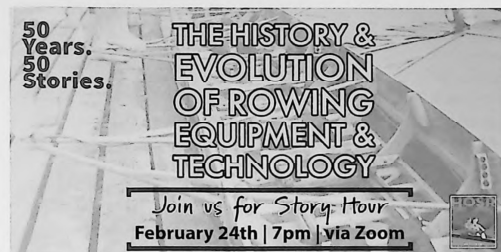

The first story hour (10/19/20) featured Karin Constant, a national and HOSR champion multiple times and early representative of the emergence of women's rowing. This was followed quickly (1/29/21) by the Vichy Eight. To those not familiar, this is the first women's crew to represent the United States in international competition. The crew was a product of the Philadelphia Girls Rowing Club in 1967. They have recently been inducted into the National Rowing Foundation Hall of Fame and will be honored at this year's regatta. These two hours were tied together historically by the session (5/20/22) on Title IX, which celebrated its 50th anniversary this year and greatly accelerated the emergence of women's rowing. Though women's rowing actually existed on a professional level in 1870, it was only at a handful of colleges and clubs until the 1960's and started its growth with Title IX in 1972, on the shoulders of many individuals such as Karin and the Vichy Eight team.

Several of the sessions focused on rowing programs, and the contributions of the Schuylkill Navy. Though different in emphasis, they reflect the important role this region has played in the development of the sport. The sessions focused on the rich history of High School Rowing (4/11/22), the participation of the Service Academies (3/25/21) including West Point, Coast Guard, and Navy, and Philadelphia Olympians (4/26/21). Though different on the surface, each of these programs has supported the development of key groups of athletes on several levels. In Philadelphia we now have firmly established a City Public Schools program as well as a growing Community rowing program, Philadelphia Adaptive Rowing, and the Bayada Regatta to support the physically challenged members of our community.

The Philadelphia Coach's hour (5/21/22) demonstrated how our strong heritage of talented coaches facilitated all the success for which we are known. This has been on all levels. The list of successful coaches is impressive, from the days of Joe Burk, Stan Bergman, Gavin White, Ted Nash, and Joanne Iverson, to the Olympic coaches of Allen Rosenberg and Mike Teti, to high school coaches like George Hines and Jim Barker, just to scratch the surface. Listening to stories about these individuals, you sense the respect and gratitude from so many rowers, and how their lives were shaped by exposure to them.

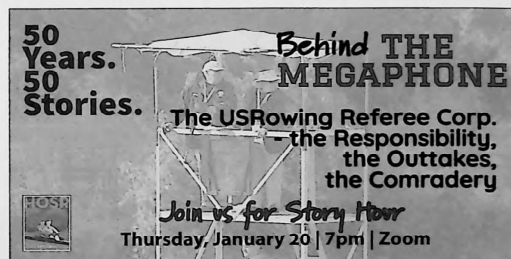

The committee also felt it was important to focus on specific aspects of the sport and Philadelphia. One of the most interesting was the History of Rowing Equipment and Technology (2/25/22), which showcased the shells, ergometers and other technology established through inventive insight and design over a 150 year period, many encouraged by the highly competitive era of professional rowing. Conceptually, if not practically, most of the equipment we take for granted today was developed in the 1870s. A session on Health of the Athlete 9/20/22 brought technology and proper training methods together. An upcoming session on River Ecology and Management in the fall will review how the nature of the Schuylkill River has made the sport possible here, and the need to preserve the River's health. These three areas of discussion form the foundation for athlete health, efficiency, and accessibility to a rowing venue.

Two other individuals have had sessions devoted to them, Jim Barker (12/3/20) and Jim Dietz (9/29/22). Though from different eras, they both had outstanding competitive careers and went beyond their rowing years to become coaches of exceptional skill and proponents of the sport. These two sessions have been extremely entertaining, as stories were exchanged, usually humorous, but also representative of uniquely talented individuals who have defined the culture of the sport. Importantly, individuals such as Jim Dietz continue to propose changes in the sport that will increase competitive opportunities for high schools and colleges for both sweep and sculling events.

Finally, the session that in many ways brought all this together for this author was on Referees and Regatta Administrators (1/21/22). This would seem an odd conclusion, yet when one looks back on all the great story hours relative to the sport, the HOSR, and Boathouse Row, the common thread is the enjoyment of competition and the culture that is a result. So, as we celebrate the relatively full return to normalcy at the HOSR, let's remember those who make it possible. Listening to the stories of these officials, and the challenges they have faced is enlightening.

In addition to our live story hours, the committee contributed written articles highlighting subjects and individuals that have made the Schuylkill River and Boathouse Row so important to the greater rowing community and special in our hearts. Several articles provide more information about the emergence of women's rowing. Additional individuals highlighted are veteran rower Lyman Perry; chief referee Rich Dougert; long-time contributor Bill Hollenback; rowing supporter John Izzard; and probably one of the most prolific contributors of all time, Larry Llecatsky with 800 wins. This 'story' log, located at www.hosr.org, continues to grow, providing pieces of the collective history of our sport.

The 12 Story Hours to date involved 100s of participants from across the country. It has been fun to be a part of the process and see folks come together after years of separation to discuss the topics and renew friendships. Please visit the HOSR web site and through the magic of today's technology, look at those sessions that interest you, and draw your own conclusions. Enjoy hearing how a sport has emerged in the last 200 years to what we know today from many individuals whose personal experiences sometimes span 75 years. We have cataloged 150 years of history and stories available to us from those who have been a part of it. The next generation should look forward and take advantage of this strong base of knowledge.

If you have suggestions for subject you would like to see visited, please contact the members of the committee through the HOSR, as it is our intention to continue this for the future.

Home is Where the Heart Is

By Richard Phillips

*"Home is where the heart is."
—Pliny the Elder*

*"Home is where you know exactly how many strokes remain between Girard and the finish line."
—Richard Phillips*

WHEN I WAS A HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETE, the away games were always more fun. We got out of school early. We traveled with friends on a bus that no doubt smelled horribly but was, nonetheless, all ours. Sometimes they even fed us. It was terrific. In college, I took up rowing, and the away races were similar. It was always more fun to travel. In college, the distances were greater. Sometimes we even got to fly. Either way, we got to see a new school, or river, or lake. We stayed in a hotel! Not a nice hotel, mind you. But a hotel nonetheless. And they definitely fed us.

Since becoming a master's rower, I have had the good fortune to row all over the world. From Hungary to the UK, from Grand Rapids to Craftsbury, I have loved exploring new countries, and new parts of my country, to race and make friends with people I would never have met were it not for rowing. Over the years, something else has happened as well. I have learned with gratitude the beauty of racing at home. And I love it.

I love waking up on race day in my own bed. I love hosting friends who are in town for the race. Most of all, I love that, once every year, everything around my home river seems special, even the places that on non-race days are all too familiar. The (typically sleepy at 5 am) locker room has newfound excitement on race day. My club mates (also typically sleepy at 5 am) are suddenly boisterous with camaraderie. Things I pass by every day—the University Barge Club World War I Memorial plaque, trophies commemorating a grudge race that took place over a century ago, even the ancient oar racks—seem special, and new. Launching from the dock, usually a mundane affair interrupted only by friends from Fairmount with a quip or two as they pass, is suddenly crowded and exciting. Stake boats and referee boats have somehow sprouted up everywhere. Friends and family are around, eagerly watching this archaic sport. (Well, at least they pretend to be eager, which is why they are friends and family.) I love it all. And hell yes, I love knowing exactly where that bridge abutment is, when to start (and finish) the turn after Columbia, and of course how far you really have to row after Girard.

You see, the Schuylkill is my home river. It is, in fact, an ancient home. From native tribes to early immigrants to founding fathers, to today, over the millennia it has been home to millions upon millions of diverse people. And it has magic to it. Tracing from rural farmland through suburbs, down into (and through) Philadelphia, and then out to the Delaware Bay and the Atlantic Ocean, the Schuylkill forms the backbone of this region. From the Schuylkill, on a crisp morning as the sun comes up to reveal its deep beauty, you can fully appreciate that it was here long before the city that it birthed. It was a home, a place people relied upon and came back to, well before a nation was born on its banks.

For those of us who are lucky enough to row here, it holds countless memories: some mundane (the countless warm ups, waiting for the warmth of the exercise and the sun to overcome the chill of the air), some poignant (like racing against my former coach in last year's HOSR). Some have been wonderful (like beating my former coach at last year's HOSR) and some devastating (losing my brother the day before the 2017 Navy Day Regatta, and racing in his memory). It is also a subtle river. It opens itself slowly to a rower. It meanders in a way that cares for its rowers, that shifts subtly, slowly revealing new views and, on occasion, effortlessly impacting the outcome of a race. The gentle sweep to port as you head upstream above Strawberry Mansion, such that the bridge slowly hides itself among the trees, until it just disappears almost exactly when it is time to turn around and head downstream. The sweet spot of current in the starting area, where if you are lucky you can gain a seat or two even before Strawberry Mansion. Even the turn below Columbia is subtle: it can certainly penalize you if you do not get it just right, but it is merely a chance to come wide and lose precious seconds, not cause a collision. It is also a chance to feel the perfection of carving your own perfect arc to match the wall's curve. Done well, it gives the satisfaction of having accomplished something simultaneously graceful and incredibly difficult. Like rowing itself.

For a rower, these subtleties mark the progress of a row, and over the years, the progress of a lifetime. The Schuylkill is, in other words, not just a home river, but a home. Period. And a beautiful one at that.

When I was younger, I thought of coming home as returning to a physical place. For me, it happened to be a very traditional home that was still occupied by both of my parents. It was safe. It was lovely. It was loud and boisterous and sometimes contentious. It wasn't perfect. No home is. But the love was palpable. It was known by me and I was known to it.

Over the years, that home, and my understanding of it, has of course changed. Physically, it has gotten older, and new beauty has emerged in it. Some people are missing now, and missed dearly. New people have joined. It is still loud and boisterous and sometimes contentious. And the love is still palpable. When I return home now, it is an opportunity not just to check on the life of my family, and on the condition of a beloved physical space, but also a chance to check in on myself. There is nothing like returning home to measure how I have changed while I was away. I see myself more clearly through its lens.

As I look forward to returning to the Head of the Schuylkill this year, I have similar thoughts about my beloved home race. Each year at the Head of Schuylkill, I see this river and this race a bit differently. To be certain, I know this race, this river, and these friends and competitors well. Likewise, I am known to them. I return to this race always a bit changed. Through it, I mark the progress of a lifetime. And I see how my beloved home (both the physical space and the meaningful space) have changed. Some are uplifting and comforting. Sometimes I reflect with sadness at the work still left undone. And on occasion, coming home is a chance to reflect on heartache and loss.

This year in particular, I will feel the absence of one of my dearest friends, and one of the great friends of this river. More than anyone else, Paul Laskow introduced me (and so many others) to the joy of masters rowing. He was a tireless and enthusiastic steward of our river and our sport. He showed me all of the things that one can do through rowing, all of the deeper joys that it contains, and he expanded my understanding of a "home" river from just a physical place to include a metaphorical space. He was not of the generation that coined the term diversity, equity and inclusion, and yet he understood how much work there is to be done in rowing and in Philadelphia, to make this home a welcoming one to all. It is fair to say that the river's revitalization through dredging would not be taking place without his vision. And most of all, this home will simply not be the same without his humor, his caring, and his love of this river and this sport. This home—his home—is so much better off for his having been here, and it will not be the same in his absence.

And, as happens, new people have joined our home. There are the young high schoolers and novices who now call this place home, and will continue to define and redefine what that means, for years to come. I also see with some sadness how too many people with whom I row look like me, think like me, and have similar backgrounds to mine. I see new needs in the communities through which we race. I see new people, with different backgrounds, who can and should be welcomed into our home. Most of all, I see its enduring, evolving beauty, and its perfection as a place for human interaction. To those of you not from here, welcome to our home. I hope you like it as much as we do.

With sincere appreciation to University Barge Club, proud host of the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta for 52 years.

In 1970, three members of University Barge Club, located in the heart of Philadelphia's Boathouse Row, launched the idea for a new fall race. At a time when only elite, college and junior athletes competed in "head" or distance races, the newly established Head of the Schuylkill Regatta emphasized graduate oarsmen and opened racing to newly emerging masters' and womens' teams. An estimated 180 competitors participated in the first race. Now, the second largest two-day regatta, the HOSR is affectionately known as "America's Favorite Regatta."

University Barge Club (UBC) was founded in 1854 by ten members of the freshman class of the University of Pennsylvania, organized "for the purpose of instruction and improvement in, and enjoyment of, the art of rowing, and the cultivation of a friendly feeling in all of those who participate in this amusement and exercise." Today it boasts a robust masters program open to all women and men rowers and is home of the rowing programs for Springside Chestnut Hill Academy.

Boathouse: Right Here in Philadelphia, PA

get his hands on one. Once the race was complete, Hugh and a Soviet rower traded a pair of Levi blue jeans for single jacket.

Hugh brought this so called "experimental jacket" back to the United States and worked on perfecting the design for two years. It is designed and built to provide rowers with total upper body freedom of movement and protection from the elements while training on the river in cold months. The unique makeup is specifically to fit the demands of rowers, which created some features way ahead of the current times. Some of the unique features of the Stevenson include:

- Orbital Shoulder Gussets
- The famous "tail" and side back pockets
- An extra long neck zip for added ventilation
- Elastic drawcord with cord lock waist

Hugh Stevenson had his jacket on the market 8 years after his first purchase in 1976 from the United States Olympic Team. Fast forward to 1984, Boathouse Founder, John Strotbeck, received that same Stevenson Jacket in his 1984 Olympic Team Kit. It was unlike anything John had seen before... very different.

Committed to quit his corporate job to solely focus on winning gold at the Seoul Olympics, John started to notice an untapped niche in the market: There was no access to rowing apparel outside of a rowing club or college program. John started small, making rowing shorts and shirts using local mills and highly skilled Italian tailors in South Philadelphia. He also hand drew the company's first catalog, but that wasn't enough! John purchased the Stevenson Company in 1987. Understanding the value of this specific design and the enhanced performance features, John created the Boathouse version of the jacket.

And from there Boathouse was born...

In 1990, Boathouse launched the Mission Pullover and the Victory full zip jackets. These styles included the orbital shoulder gussets that give total upper body freedom and meet the needs of other athletes. Quickly embraced by college, high school, and club athletes, these two jackets plus the Stevenson simply became known as the "Boathouse" jackets. Today, these three styles remain our biggest sellers and continue to grow in popularity.

Boathouse's vision transformed tremendously to becoming the best custom outerwear manufacturer in the world. There was no doubt Boathouse was one of the best, supplying not only colleges, prep, and high schools nationwide, but also NFL teams, many international soccer teams including both USA Men's and Women's team, and the Brazilian Juniors, to name a few. Boathouse continued to thrive as the best custom outerwear company through the mid 2000s, growing significantly in football, lacrosse, track & field, rugby, and other outdoor sports. By 2005, Boathouse employed more than 225 full time, most of whom are in our vertically integrated factory in Northeast Philadelphia.

As the vision of Boathouse is continuously evolving, our mission remains the same. We are not just a company. Boathouse is a community of like-minded athletes and artists who believe that the best clothes bring out the best in all of us. After four decades, we still believe in comfort without compromise, style without substitution, and elite performance for all.

The essence of Boathouse can be found in our first product – the Stevenson Jacket. Today, this iconic design remains our number one seller. Our relentless attention to performance has optimized functional design, enabling us to deliver engineered gear that never weighs you down, allowing you to move seamlessly through your next challenge. The innovative silhouette, the shoulder gussets allowing full arm rotation, and the signature detail within the timeless shape rests within its extended tuck tail providing warmth and protection. The Stevenson is the premier choice for athletes everywhere, including the top Olympic athletes. The limited-edition burgundy Core-tex was specially created 18 years ago for an NFL team. Aligning with our passion to promote sustainability, we have given this leftover fabric a new life and created 53 of our most cutting-edge jackets yet.

IT ALL STARTED WITH A MISSION, that became a jacket, that became a mission. Boathouse, founded by Olympic rower John Strotbeck, was born from a single item, the iconic Stevenson Jacket. The Stevenson jacket embodies what Boathouse is all about, providing athletes and athletic enthusiasts with functional apparel that performs better for the athlete focusing on protection, functionality, and innovation. So where exactly did this iconic Stevenson Jacket originate from?

While competing at the World Championships in Lucerne, Switzerland, a man by the name of Hugh Stevenson was in awe as he watched Soviet rowers train in the nastiest, coldest, wettest, most miserable weather. But it wasn't the weather that caught Hugh's attention. It was the jackets the Russian athletes were wearing that gave them the ability to move the oar with ease. At that moment, Hugh knew he needed to

Award Ceremonies, Race Sponsors & Honorees

Gold, silver, and bronze medals are given for each qualifying event. In addition, trophies are awarded in many of the events named in memory of, or in tribute to, some of the Legends of the Schuylkill.

Award ceremonies will be held throughout the weekend. Any changes to the schedule will be posted at www.hosr.org, on social media, and at the Awards Desk located at the Three Angels. Athletes and coaches are welcome to take pictures on the Awards stage at any time of the day; we encourage you to post your photos on the HOSR Facebook and Instagram pages (#hosr2022)!

Make it a Weekend in Philadelphia... Come Back Soon and Come Back Often!

Eastern State Penitentiary

Cell blocks open after dark for a not-too-spooky iteration of its Halloween event that underwent a makeover in 2021. With five different haunted houses, a psychedelic walk-through experience, interactive performances and more, this event in the nation's first penitentiary offers the perfect setting for seasonal frights. Big Top Terror sees you outrunning circus performers and murderous clowns while the sleep paralysis-themed Nightmares will have you losing sleep for days.
Visit: www.easternstate.org/215-236-3300
Where: 2027 Fairmount Avenue, just a short walk from the Regatta

Philadelphia Museum of Art: Matisse in the 1930s

On view at the Philadelphia Museum of Art, this exhibition explores changes in Matisse's work across multiple formats, including easel and decorative painting, sculpture, printmaking, drawing, and the illustrated book. The exhibition also addresses the methods of working that renewed the artist's style, as well as his depictions of female models in the studio and more.

Visit: philamuseum.org/215-763-8200
Where: Philadelphia Museum of Art, 2600 Benjamin Franklin Parkway
When: Through January 29, 2023

US Rowing: STEM to Stern

LESS THAN A YEAR AFTER ITS INCEPTION, Greenwich Crew's STEM to Stern program is already making big strides in bringing rowing to Connecticut's underserved communities. Spearheaded by Director of Rowing Mike Wieneke and Secondary Instructional Coach Jen Bressler, the program has added more than 10 athletes to the team, many of whom have already decided to continue rowing through high school.

"Greenwich often has a perception. You say Greenwich, and people know it's a very well-off town," Wieneke said. "But some things that people don't know are that we have three housing developments. We have a large number of students on free and reduced lunch in our school system. And, there's really a big need for programming to help such a large population."

By partnering with the local Boys & Girls Club, Greenwich Crew has been able to provide just that. A nationwide organization offering voluntary after-school programs, Boys & Girls Club of Greenwich already offered everything from wrestling to theater. It hadn't yet had the opportunity to offer rowing.

"We've been able to work with the Boys & Girls Club to better understand its mission and its objectives and align our STEM to Stern program with those things, while also incorporating them into the larger Greenwich program."

Their first learn to row drew almost 50 kids. Twelve of them enrolled in the program.

"When we started, we didn't know if we'd even get anyone who wanted to row. Remembering back to watching those kids take their first strokes on the rowing boards in the pool to seeing where they were this spring – the excitement, seeing them want to continue – It's really inspiring," Wieneke said. "Not only to come in and try the sport, but watch them interact with our high school athletes, talk, develop friendships. It wasn't like, 'Oh, there's the STEM to Stern athletes.' Everyone was just rowers and that was why they were connecting."

Three of those students are moving up to Greenwich's competitive high school team next season.

"Sometimes, it just takes understanding. We're fortunate to have the resources here. We should be using those resources to do more. You won't know who you're missing out on until you find them. Once you get in the boat," Wieneke continued. "It's the ultimate equalizer."

A partner of USRowing since 2021, STEM to Stern is at the forefront of changing the sport, helping clubs become more diverse and competitive by eliminating barriers that often keep students from underserved communities from participating. By providing transportation, swimming lessons, and access to STEM education, in addition to training facilitators, coaches, and volunteers to run inclusive and empowering programs, STEM to Stern does all it can to ensure that students are successful both on and off the water.

50 Years of Title IX and the Stories of "Firsts" on Boathouse Row

By Maura Kennedy

HEADING INTO 2022, AS A MEMBER OF WOMEN OF THE ROW -- a network for women rowers and paddlers -- I looked forward to the year's celebrations, excited to mark the 50th anniversary of Title IX. As an education amendment signed into law in 1972, Title IX has had an impact on many women athletes, providing scholarships and educational opportunities that have not always been accessible to female students. Many girl and women rowers have heard of the stories of the 1976 Yale women's crew team who protested the university's unfair conditions and unequal treatment, stripping in the Yale athletic director's office to reveal the words "Title IX" drawn in blue marker on the women's backs and chests. It's safe to say, the phrase "not all heroes wear capes" (or shirts, in this case) applies to those 19 women rowers who helped paved the path for female students and future rowers. As more universities look to recruit female athletes, more women are graduating college and embarking into professional careers, with new offers of opportunities. Title IX has also opened the door for women athletes to grow professionally in the sport of rowing, both on Boathouse Row and across the world. Even Philadelphia Girls Rowing Club (PGRC), arguably the oldest women's rowing club in the nation, faced challenges on Boathouse Row as a womens-only club.

"When the Schuylkill River stopped freezing, the club, which was the Philadelphia Skating and Humane Society at the time, and its members had an opportunity to utilize the boathouse for rowing. Before PGRC, women didn't have access to rowing boats or boathouses on the Schuylkill River and in the greater Philadelphia region. Jack Kelly gave the women at PGRC boats, and the women members competed against themselves since there wasn't any other competition. At the time, many of the women members at PGRC were girlfriends or wives of other male rowers who were members at other Clubs on Boathouse Row since most people did not know what rowing was," said Ernestine Bayer, one of the original organizers and first members of PGRC.

As more people learned about the sport of rowing, and Title IX exposed women in particular to crew, there was more of a demand to allow female members at the Clubs on Boathouse Row. While there are still boathouses on the Row that don't permit women members today, one woman decided that she was going to open that door for other women, including her daughter, in 1989 at one of the oldest Clubs on the Row, University Barge Club (UBC).

"Rowing was the first time I felt discrimination. I love being on the water, but back then, it was a huge personal challenge to be a female rower. I don't think young women understand what the women of Boathouse Row's 'firsts' had to experience. When I first started, there was one rowing event for women. Now, I'm seeing women who are doctors, lawyers and career professionals at rowing events, coming down to the course, and I think, 'Yes! This is what we fought for.' But we have to be vigilant because Title IX is one legislative action that could be wiped off the books," noted Anne Cutler at a recent Title IX Boathouse Row event.

- Amanda Kraus - First female CEO of USRowing
- Ernestine Bayer - One of the first women to learn how to row on Boathouse Row; PGRC member
- Sophie Socha - Vichy Eight rower; PGRC/Sedgeley Club member; started rowing in 1961
- Lois Trench-Hines - Launched community rowing program Trench-Hines Center; responsible for women rowing in Dad Vail Regatta; started rowing 1965
- Penny Henwood - Vichy Eight rower; PGRC member
- Anita 'Jinx' Sacco - Vichy Eight rower; PGRC member
- Carol Bower - One of the first female Olympians
- Deirdre Mullen - One of the first collegiate rowers on UPenn's Women's Rowing Team
- Liz Bergen - First female Schuylkill Navy Commodore
- Karin Tetlow - World's rower, Bachelors member, author
- Patricia Mynagh - First Captain at Bachelors
- Anne Cutler - First woman permitted to join UBC
- Anne Matthews - One of the first dragon boaters on Schuylkill River
- Brannon Johnson - First woman to launch and operate a black-owned rowing club
- Margo Angelopolous - First woman to run Quaker City Regatta

Watching the women discuss their challenges and stories of firsts, it reiterates the gratitude that I, and many younger women, have to be a fellow rower and member of Boathouse Row. There is no doubt the impact Title IX has made on expanding opportunities for women and girls in sports. In 1972, there were around 300,000 women and girls playing in high school and college sports across the U.S., receiving only 2 percent of college athletic budgets. Moreover, only a dozen women competed in the first Head of the Schuylkill Regatta (HOSR). Now, around half of all HOSR participants are female. Moreover, recent research from Women's Sports Foundation found that more than 3 million girls and women play sports, with almost 200,000 women competing in intercollegiate sports, which is six times as many as in 1972 when Title IX was first passed. The impact continues today, as Americans are seeing the largest contingent of U.S. female Olympians in history, with many Olympians rowing and training out of Boathouse Row.

Three critical takeaways from Title IX's 50th anniversary celebrations: We must continue to support and protect Title IX and legislation that provides opportunities to girls and women experienced today. We must share stories of “firsts” and mentor other women and girls, providing them insight and opportunities to grow. And lastly, we must educate ourselves and others about the laws that will help open doors for generations to come.

Tracing the Historical Journey of Black Rowers in Philadelphia by Using the Tools in my Toolbox as a Rower and a Photographer

By Sabina Louise Pierce

THE FIRST AMERICAN RACE WAS IN 1872 on the Schuylkill River and since then rowing has been historically a white sport. In all the years of US Olympic participation in rowing, there have been only five Black rowers representing the US with no Black rowers on the 2020 US Olympic rowing team. Sadly, the absence of racial diversity has plagued the sport since its inception.

In 2010 I created an exhibit of 6 panels that hung on my boathouse, Penn AC, for the summer - Faces of Rowing. I wanted to show the diversity of rowers that the public doesn't see behind the locked doors on Boathouse Row that I saw on the river, I wanted to show that many looked just like them. But after rowing up to rowers on the river, in my little 1x, asking if they wanted to be part of my project, I had a hard time finding as many black rowers as I thought there were. Fast forward 10 years later in 2020, deep covid lockdown, with plenty of time on my hands I decided to revisit why?

After talking to a few Black rowers, I was told that the biggest reason Black people don't row, is the lack of representation. I had to agree and saw it as an untold story in rowing and Black history and began focusing on Philadelphia's rowing community as a place to start.

The people I have found are brave, resilient, and succeeding at different levels and in different times from 1960 to present. From Vesper's Anita DeFrantz the first Black Olympian in 1976 to Brannon Johnson who for the over 10 years has tirelessly opened access and diversity to the river and rowing in Philadelphia through her BLJ Community Rowing at community dock on the side of the river, to Maurice Scott who at 15 started with a learn to row program and now in his 20's pushes it forward as an ambassador as he rows the globe. They along with others are breaking through the racial divide by showing up and excelling.

These images speak to their journey and hopefully amplify their stories. My objective is to create a mural with Philadelphia's Mural Arts that not only celebrates but weaves a story of how we got to where we are with the hope that change will continue by amplifying Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion not only in Philadelphia's rowing community but throughout the sport. As "you have to see it to be it."

The People of Boathouse Row: Gardner Cadwalader

By Merry Jones

HE WAS TO BECOME AN OLYMPIAN, a Pan American Games gold medalist, and a formidable oarsman in venues from Mexico to England, from Canada to Egypt. He has become an active, highly respected and influential figure in Philadelphia's rowing community. But rowing almost didn't happen for 74-year-old architect Gardner Cadwalader.

"My senior year at St. Andrews Prep," he recalls, "I found rowing so boring that I didn't even join the team. In rowing, you just sat there. By contrast, I loved football. In football, you got to run, shove, throw a ball, tackle and knock people down."

And so, when he arrived at the University of Pennsylvania as a freshman in the fall of 1966, Gardner went out for football. "Penn had this freshman rowing coach, a guy named Ted Nash, who kept trying to recruit me. But I resisted. I had images of being a college football star." He chuckles, remembering. "I envisioned the stands filled, thousands of fans cheering for me when I came onto the field, all of them screaming, 'Gardner! Gardner!'"

It didn't quite work out that way. In fact, the freshman football coach kept Gardner on the bench for the entire season, until the final game. "It was pouring cats and dogs," he recalls. "Any other game would have been canceled, but we played. Finally, in that deluge, for the first time all season, the coach sent me in. I looked up at the stands where no crowds were cheering or shouting my name. In fact, the stands were empty except for one lone guy, drenched but slowly clapping. My dad."

After that game, Gardner gave up football. "I went to the boathouse."

That relentless freshman rowing coach was delighted. The following summer, Ted Nash offered Gardner a spot in the 1967 Pan American games. "He put me with Robbie Meek, the strongest guy on campus, as a coxed pair. Ted changed everything for me. He was inspirational."

At the Pan Am games, the coxed pair won a gold medal.

After that victory, Gardner returned to Penn as a sophomore, rowing varsity with coach Joe Burk. "Our three varsity boats raced each other every single practice day. Coach Burk seated us randomly, using a unique empirical method in which he shuffled a deck of cards, each card marked with the name of a rower. Each hand he dealt formed a boat. 'My name,' Gardner grimaces, "was on the King of Clubs, a fateful card if ever there was one."

Indeed. Despite the randomness of the seating method, the boats containing Gardner lost, consistently. Thirteen races in a row. "I became known as Death Cadwalader," he grins. "I'd won a gold medal in the Pan Ams, paired with the strongest guy on the team. But there I was, in the third boat all that year."

Despite losing so steadily, Gardner remained committed to rowing. "It wasn't just about winning. It was friendship. A way to achieve something. Rowing gave us a shared identity on a big campus. We were from all over, different backgrounds, different majors. Lightweights. Heavyweights. But we were bound together."

Eventually, Coach Joe Burk realized something was wrong with his shuffling system, and when it came time to seat varsity boats to compete in the 1968 Olympics, he included Gardner.

So, Gardner went to Longbeach, CA, hoping to qualify for the 1968 Olympics as part of Penn's eight. Their competition was Vesper Boat Club and Harvard. "We thought we had it," he shakes his head. "We led for 2000 meters with open water. But then Harvard gained on us, and it was neck and neck until the finish."

In the end, Harvard won by four inches.

"Four inches!" Gardner still can't believe it. "Think about how short a time that is when eights are barreling ahead full speed. It's

1968 Olympic Four w/Cox

Over the next few years, Gardner continued to row at Penn, then in graduate school at Cambridge University (where his St. John's college Blue Boat beat Oxford!) He raced all over: in Henley, Canadian Henley, and the IRAs. When the 1972 Olympics approached, he was psyched that a national team had been formed and attended the east coast Olympic selection camp.

"Our coach was Steve Gardner, one of the best coaches ever. A mix-up took me out of the trials for the eight, but I was in a straight coxless four. In practice, it was by far the fastest boat I'd ever rowed in. But on the day of the trials, our steering was way off. To our astonishment, we didn't even qualify. In fact, we came in dead last."

That summer marked the end of that level of competitive rowing for Gardner. "I came away having learned that, although winning is great, rowing isn't entirely about winning or losing. It's also about sportsmanship. About having respect for the competition, win or lose."

Rowing also taught him other life lessons. "Possibly the most important one was that you can always push past your limit. No matter how exhausted and drained you are—if you have to—if you really need to, you can keep going. You can go further. You can do more."

These days, Gardner is committed to "do more" for Philadelphia's rowing community. Where there's a need for creative thinking or problem solving, he's there. His recent volunteer work has included interviewing and selecting artists to create works that are close to his heart: a commissioned bas-relief of the late beloved coxswain John Hartigan, and another of his late renowned coach, Ted Nash.

Gardner has endless ideas for other projects he'd like to be involved with. "I'd love to see a rowing museum, even if it's not a designated building. In a way, Boathouse Row is already a museum, a living one, rife with history and personality. I'd love to see regular open houses and tours available to the public."

He'd also like to help make rowing more available to the city's public school students and is figuring out ways to use existing facilities for their boathouse.

And he envisions reconnecting the lower and upper river near the Water Works, so rowers and others can access the entire Schuylkill. "We could do it so it wouldn't harm the fish. And then we could build a rowing center on the lower river, at Gray's Ferry."

Even as Gardner imagines rowing's future, he remains connected to its past, still racing with his pals from St. Andrews. "We live all over the place, so we meet a couple of days before a regatta, practice a bit, and race. The friendships endure."

He smiles, reminiscing. "How lucky was I? I raced internationally, competed in the Pan Am games, IRAs, and the Olympics, got coached by Ted Nash, Joe Burk, Steve Gladstone—some of the best coaches in rowing history—and I rowed with world-class, outstanding oarsmen. Now, I belong to a great rowing community where I have great friends and can do my part, always striving to make improvements. But when I think about it, I see that all of it was plain luck. Just the result of a lucky accident. Because I was never even going to row. I was going to play football."

nothing. Almost immeasurable."

Close races like that one were frustrating, but Gardner is convinced that they changed the course of U.S. rowing, underlining the need for a national team. "If we'd had a national team that year, we could have combined the best from each boat, making us a stronger team. Instead, Harvard went alone and came in 6th.

After the upset with Harvard, Gardner and the "engine room" of Penn's eight formed a 4+, won their trials and went to the '68 Olympics in Mexico City, where they came in 5th.

That same summer, Gardner competed in a coxed pair in the European Championships. Once again, he experienced the need for a U.S. team. "We were up against fierce competition, powerful national teams, all supported by their governments. But in the U.S., if you wanted to compete, you just put a boat together from your school, your club, whatever. Robbie and I were just two guys from Penn."

programs that encouraged more than 8,000 residents and visitors to reconnect with Fairmount Park, FDR Park, and our neighborhood parks. Through a wide array of programs including old favorites like the summer scavenger hunt, yoga at Lemon Hill, birdwatching, stargazing, and seasonal weekly walks with We Walk PHL, plus new activities such as salsa dancing and kayaking at FDR Park, we are thrilled to welcome so many people into the Philadelphia park system to reconnect with nature and with us.

Restoration has been a recurring theme, as we build momentum on major capital projects underway in FDR Park and Fairmount Park. This year, we broke ground on the first three major projects for the FDR Park Plan including an adaptive reuse and transformation of the former guardhouse into the park's first ever Welcome Center, an inclusive and accessible nature playground, and a restored 33 acre native tidal wetland. We also recently completed an extension of the Parkside Edge project that will help restore safe pedestrian and bicycle access to West Fairmount Park. In East Fairmount Park, we moved an eroding cliff-side quarter-mile stretch of the Boxers' Trail further inland and upslope. Our historic preservation team has several ongoing major restoration projects, including significant repairs at our new headquarters at the Ohio House in West Fairmount Park, and won awards from the Preservation Alliance for Greater Philadelphia for their contributions to projects at the Smith Playhouse and the First Unitarian Church.

We also celebrate renewal and growth with our Natural Lands team carrying out critical work in reforestation, wetland enhancement, meadow establishment, and invasive species management, while our TreePhilly, Farm Philly and Volunteer teams focus on building community and providing support through tree planting initiatives, urban agriculture resources, corporate and public volunteer workdays, and our annual spring and fall Love Your Park service days.

WITH NEARLY 10,200 ACRES OF PUBLIC PARKS AND WATERWAYS, there's so much to explore and enjoy here in Philadelphia. At Fairmount Park Conservancy, our mission is to bring those parks to life. We are a non-profit that works with the City of Philadelphia and its communities to steward our parks and nurture our shared environment, cultural resources and public health. In essence, we help to fill in the gaps between what the City can do and what our parks and communities need by leading capital projects, restoring natural lands, preserving historic structures, providing public programming & activations, and engaging communities through park stewardship and civic initiatives.

At the Conservancy, the past year has been one of reconnection, restoration, and renewal. With Philadelphians discovering and visiting our parks more than ever, we ramped up our efforts throughout the past year to offer over 100 events and public
